DISPATCHES FROM GEN. McCLELLAN.

FIRST DISPATCH.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC, Sept. 18—8.30 A. M.

Maj.-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief:

But little occurred yesterday, except skirmishing.

Last night the enemy abandoned his position, leaving his dead and wounded on the field.

We are again in pursuit.

I do not yet know whether he is falling back on an interior position, or crossing the river.

We may safely claim a victory.

GEORGE B. McCLELLAN,
Major-General.

SECOND DISPATCH.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC, Friday, Sept. 19—10½ A. M.

Maj.-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief:

FRANKLIN is driving the enemy across the river.

Our victory was complete.

The enemy is driven back into Virginia. Maryland and Pennsylvania are now safe.

GEO. B. McCLELLAN, Major-General.

OUR LATEST WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19—11½ P. M.

A special dispatch from the TIMES' Baltimore correspondent says that Gen. McCLELLAN's bulletins have greatly discouraged the rebels there. They are inclined to believe that the Confederate combinations have failed, and that their cause is ruined.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19—Is Midnight.

It is now clearly apparent that the rebel army is repelled from Maryland. Probably nearly or quite the whole has succeeded in crossing the Potomac, with slight additional loss of men, wagons and artillery. It is believed that the rebels can sufficiently defend the most important crossings to enable the bulk of their forces successfully to retreat to Winchester, which is probably their base, or to any other point they choose.

LATEST REPORTS FROM HEADQUARTERS.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Friday Morning, Sept. 19, 1862.

Yesterday was occupied in burying the dead and caring for the wounded.

The rebels sent in a flag of truce in the morning, asking permission to bury their own dead, which was granted.

At first the orders were very stringent against holding intercourse with the rebels, but during the afternoon they were relaxed, and the troops of both sides freely intermingled.

The following is a list of some of the killed and wounded:

Brig.-Gen. Rodman, commanding a brigade in Maj.-Gen. Burnside's Division, was wounded.

Col. Stone, of the Fourth Rhode Island Regiment, was wounded in the leg.

Lieut.-Col. Appleton, of the Eighth Connecticut Regiment, was wounded.

Capt. Comstock, of the Eleventh Connecticut Regiment.

Lieut. Arenberg, of SEAMAN's Ohio Battery, lost a leg.

Major Giles, of the Eighty-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment, was severely wounded.

Col. Barlow, of the Sixty-first New-York Regiment, wounded.

Gen. Gaskill, of the Sixty-first New-York Regiment, was killed.

Col. Hall, of the Tenth Pennsylvania Regiment, was wounded.

Col. Ossenbridge, of the Nine Hundred and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment, was killed.

Maj. Dwight, of the Second Massachusetts Regiment, was wounded.

At daylight, this morning, it was discovered that the enemy had changed their position. Whether their whole force has crossed the river, or whether a new position nearer the river is held at Sharpsburgh, is not known.

Had the rebels retreated, a general engagement between both armies would have taken place this morning.

OUR DISPATCHES FROM HARRISBURGH.

HARRISBURGH, Friday, Sept. 19—1 P. M.

A dispatch just in from Gov. CURTIN, on the battle-field, says that the battle is raging terribly, and progressing favorably for our side.

McCLELLAN has been largely reinforced. The Pennsylvania militia were also advancing to the field, under Gen. REYNOLDS.

Surgeon-Gen. SMITH has telegraphed to prepare for the wounded to be brought here, and all the churches and other buildings are being got ready.

There is intense excitement, but every one is full of hope.

HARRISBURGH, Friday, Sept. 19—8 P. M.

By an official telegram just received, we learn that our victory is complete. The enemy is in full retreat, and our forces are driving them to the river.

No details at present.

FROM THE ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT.

HARRISBURGH, Friday, Sept. 19.

Information just received from the battle-field says our victory is complete, and that Gen. FRANKLIN is in hot pursuit of the enemy, and driving them across the Potomac. The whole Federal army is in good condition, and the enemy has been badly punished.

THE GREAT BATTLE OF WEDNESDAY.

HARRISBURGH, Friday, Sept. 19.

A gentleman who left the battle-field at 9 o'clock on Wednesday night, confirms the statement of the reporter of the Associated Press at Headquarters, in every particular.

He says that our forces occupied the position chosen by the enemy at the commencement of the battle, and that the rebels were driven back a mile and a half at all points, except upon our extreme right, which they still held at the close of the day.

Our informant was all day within a hundred yards of Gen. McCLELLAN, and says that the results of the day were regarded by him and his Staff as a glorious victory, though not a final end.

There was no faltering at any point of the line of our whole army.

Our soldiers were exultant at the results of the day's fight, and Gen. McCLELLAN was in the highest spirits.

The opinion of Gen. McCLELLAN and those around him was that the final result would depend on who got reinforcements first.

Our informant says that nothing had been heard on the field of the capture of Gen. LONGSTREET or the killing of Gen. HILL, and that there is no truth in either report.

Twenty thousand more reinforcements were expected to reach the field yesterday from Harrisburgh.

Our informant thinks the loss of the rebels fully equal to ours.

The gentleman who furnished us with the foregoing intelligence is one of our most respectable and intelligent citizens, and says that the battle of Wednesday was not a decisive one. It was a contest in which all the advantages were with Gen. McCLELLAN, who occupied the field of battle at the close of the day.

GEN. MANSFIELD.

Brig.-Gen. J. K. F. MANSFIELD, killed at the battle of Sharpsburgh on Wednesday, was a native of Connecticut, from which State he was appointed a cadet to the West Point Military Academy in Dec., 1817. He was at the time of his death about sixty years of age. He graduated on the 30th of June, 1822, standing No. 2 in a class of forty members, among whom are the names of Gens. BURNSIDE, McCALL, and others noted during the present war. On the 1st of July, 1822, he was brevetted a Second Lieutenant of a corps of Engineers, and received his full rank the same day. On the 5th of March, 1823, he was promoted to a First Lieutenancy, and on the 7th of July, 1838, became Captain. He served in the Texan and Mexican wars, and on the 9th of May, 1846, was brevetted Major for gallant and distinguished services in the defense of Fort Brown, in Texas. On the 23d of the following September, he was brevetted Lieutenant-Colonel for gallant and meritorious conduct in the several battles of Monterey, in Mexico, on the 21st, 22d and 23d of September, 1846.

On the first of those days he was severely wounded. He was brevetted Colonel on the 23d of February, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at Buena Vista. During the campaigns of 1846 and 1847 of the war with Mexico he held the position of Chief Engineer of the army under Gen. TAYLOR. Previous to the war he had been appointed as member of the Board of Engineers, viz.: From Dec. 8, 1842, to Sept. 8, 1845, and after the war he resumed this same position, which he kept for some time. On the 28th of May, 1861, he was appointed an Inspector-General of the United States Army, with the rank of Colonel. This position he held at the breaking out of the rebellion. On the 6th of May, 1861, he was brevetted a Brigadier-General of the Regular United States Army, and on the 14th of May, 1861, was commissioned a full Brigadier-General. He was placed in command of the position at Newport's News, which he held until the advance upon Norfolk transferred his services to the other shore of the James River.

He was next placed in command at Suffolk, Va. When Gen. PORE met with his reverses in Virginia, and demanded a Court of Inquiry to examine into the conduct of certain of his officers, Gen. MANSFIELD was ordered to proceed to Washington to sit on one of the Court. The inquiry being soon postponed, by order of the President, at the request of Gen. McCLELLAN, Gen. MANSFIELD encamped a part of day in the field. In the discharge of that duty he fell, at the post of honor.

COL. MONELL.

Among the killed in this weekly terrible battle in Maryland, is Col. MONELL, the commander of the justly celebrated "Rockall" Regiment, while leading a charge at the head of his men, near Antietam Creek. Hon. WARNER MONELL was a son of Rev. A. MONELL, a Connecticut clergyman, and was born in Saxton County, New-York, in 1820. He was educated at Yale College, and entered upon the study of the law in the office of GEORGE W. SEWARD, at Auburn. In 1847 he commenced practice in this City, but was obliged to abandon his profession two years afterward, by reason of ill health. He removed to Pennsylvania, and engaged in banking. Upon the breaking out of the rebellion he entered as a private in a company known as "Wild Cats," commanded by Capt. BOOZ, which was afterwards incorporated with the famous Rockall Regiment. In a short time he was chosen First Lieutenant, and then Colonel. In the capacity he led the regiment in a magnificent bayonet charge at Drainesville. The exploits of the regiment are familiar to all. While with McDOWELL on the Rappahannock, while in pursuit of STONEWALL JACKSON up the Shenandoah Valley, under FREMONT, and particularly of the spirited battle of Cross Keys, the Rockalls gained the foremost place for valor and vigor. And since then they have not ceased for a day to harrass the enemy. They accompanied Gen. BANKS in the recent expedition up the Potomac in quest of STONEWALL JACKSON. On Tuesday they came up with the enemy under LEE, near Sharpsburgh. The National troops were disposed in order of battle. The Rockalls were at the front. The action commenced at dark and lasted two hours. Col. MONELL had just charged upon the rebel forces, driving them back half a mile, when he received his death wound.

He was a daring and intrepid officer, a generous friend and kinsman, the idol of his family and regiment, and his loss cannot be replaced.

BATTLE OF ANTIETAM CREEK.

Full Particulars from Our Special Correspondent.

The Most Stupendous Struggle of Modern Times.

The Battle Won by Consummate Generalship.

The Rebel Losses Estimated as High as Thirty Thousand.

A GREAT NUMBER OF PRISONERS CAPTURED.

HEADS-FIELD OF ANTIETAM CREEK, Thursday, Sept. 18, 1862.

Another great battle has been fought, and the cause of the Union has once more been vindicated upon one of the most bloody and well-contested fields known to ancient or modern times. Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1862, will, we predict, hereafter be looked upon as an epoch in the history of the rebellion, from which will date the inauguration of its downfall. On that day about one hundred and sixty thousand men met in deadly strife upon the field of Antietam—a name which will occupy a leading position in the history of the war—and there, marshaled by brave and able men, fought with a desperation and courage never before excelled, and rarely, if ever equaled, for twelve hours, leaving the Union army in possession of the contested ground. This victory was not gained, however, without the sacrifice of many valuable lives, and the maiming of thousands of individuals.

PRECEDING EVENTS.

Before attempting to present even a glance at this battle, let us first prepare the reader for a correct understanding of it by relating—in continuation of my last letter—the events immediately preceding the great contest. My last brought Gen. McCLELLAN's advance into Maryland up to midday on Tuesday, Sept. 16, at which time the army occupied a position in close proximity to the road leading from Boonsville to Sharpsburgh, and upon and near the left bank of the little creek known by the name of Antietam, which rises in Central Pennsylvania, and, after running in a southerly direction, its waters are mingled with the turgid waters of the Potomac, about five miles above Harper's Ferry.

The enemy occupied a position on the right bank of the Antietam, favorably located for both offensive and defensive operations, and in this respect had the advantage. To circumvent the enemy, and secure an equally favorable position, was the first object to be obtained. That this required the genius of a great leader, needed no military man to elucidate, for the whole position of affairs could be taken in at a glance. How well and successfully this object was accomplished, the success of our arms is abundant evidence. Of some of the details of the movement to this end we shall give in the proper place. Just across the creek, in plain view from the eastern bank, the enemy's skirmishers could be distinctly seen, and from elevated positions massed forces of infantry and cavalry could be discovered in every little valley and ravine for miles on either hand. Two hundred thousand men was what the enemy pretended to have within the scope of the eye, and from repeated personal inspection, aided by an excellent glass, while standing in a favorable position, I should judge the figure named not an exaggerated one.

PREPARATIONS FOR A MOVEMENT.

Between 12 and 2 o'clock P. M. all was silent along the front. The German Battery of sixteen 20-pound Parrott guns, upon the eminence overlooking the river's bank were silent. Major ARNY had fallen, and the infantry battalions were quietly resting upon the ground under the hill, upon the tops of which were planted our artillery. This quietness was like the quietness that precedes the storm. The Commanding General had retired upon the ground at an early hour the day before, and had made himself familiar with the Position, and at the time of which we write was busily engaged in giving the necessary instructions to the Commanders of Corps, so as to render our success in the impending conflict as much a matter of certainty as possible.

THE MOVEMENT.

Soon after 2 o'clock P. M. the Parrott guns, to which allusion has been made before, were opened upon the enemy and worked with great rapidity, and nearly every shell thrown, as I afterward ascertained, did fearful execution in the massed columns of the enemy. In a brief space after this terrible fire had been opened, there was a movement of the troops inexplicable to the uninitiated at the moment, but the object of which was soon revealed to the careful observer. The Antietam was to be crossed! Gen. HOOKER's Corps, by a flank movement, gained a point to the north of between five and three miles, and changing direction to the left reached the river at Kelly's Ford. A portion of the Pennsylvania Reserve, under command of Brig.-Gen. MEADE, were thrown across the river and were deployed as skirmishers, and upon their cover and the support of the German New-York Battery, Gen. HOOKER's column very speedily gained a foothold upon the opposite bank. Our skirmishers were met with a galling fire, poured in by the skirmishers of the enemy and the fire from a battery of four or six pieces, so located as to give a raking fire to the advancing column. Fortunately this battery was not well managed, and most of the missiles were thrown too high, hence our loss at this point was comparatively trifling. This battery was quickly silenced, and the rapid movements of Gen. HOOKER's column soon placed it in jeopardy; but the enemy, always on the alert, managed to get their pieces out of the way before a battery could be thrown across to furnish the infantry columns in its local movements. The enemy's skirmishers were forced back step by step by the Reserves to their main body, by which time the whole of the advancing column was in position, and ready for more decisive offensive operations. The enemy rushed forward seemingly bent upon annihilating the comparatively small force arrayed against them, and several times there was some wavering under the terrible and incessant musketry—but the traces quickly rallied, and, under the lead of their able commanders, mastered the much coveted and "necessary" position to secure success. This movement across the river was one for which Gen. HOOKER was peculiarly qualified, and he executed it in a manner highly creditable to his skill as a General. Here the battle of Antietam commenced in earnest. Until nightfall set in Gen. HOOKER pressed the enemy back, and every step was gained by hard fighting.

THE DEMONSTRATION TO THE LEFT.

Tuesday afternoon Gen. SUMNER's column was brought up to the river, and directed to make a feint, operation on the enemy's right, by crossing the stream three or four miles below the point where Gen. HOOKER had crossed, with a view to secure a stone bridge—to facilitate the crossing of artillery and ammunition—and also to threaten the enemy's right flank, in conjunction with the demonstration of Gen. HOOKER on his (the enemy's) left, which was to be the real point of attack. This order was promptly obeyed, and carried out with alacrity. Gen. SUMNER, by dark, had arrived at the point of crossing, and on the following morning forced the enemy back from the bridge, and secured important aid with his artillery.

TUESDAY NIGHT.

During the night of Tuesday, Gen. BANKS' Corps, then under the command of Gen. MANSFIELD, who was killed early the following day, Gen. FRANKLIN's Corps and two divisions of Gen. SUMNER's Corps—SEDGWICK's and FRENCH's—were thrown across the river at the ford to sustain Gen. HOOKER, when the line of battle was formed in the following order: Gen. HOOKER on the right; Gen. SUMNER—the line running nearly north and south—the left inclining toward the river and in a direction a little to the east of south. Gen. FRANKLIN's force was placed in a reserve on the right. On Wednesday morning early the balance of Gen. SUMNER's Corps—Gen. RICHARDSON's Division—was thrown across the creek and extended the line to the left; the commands of Gens. MORRIS, FITZ-JOHN PORTER and COUCH were brought on to the field later in the day, but were not required, and were therefore held in reserve.

THE BATTLE OF ANTIETAM.

On Wednesday morning, Sept. 17, the sun rose in a cloudless sky, and all nature seemed to smile as if the world were filled with the elect of God. But its splendors were soon dimmed with the smoke rising from the battle-field.

To enable the reader to understand the events of this day, he should look at a map which has laid out the principal roads throughout the State of Maryland. With a pencil follow the road or "pike" from Boonsboro' direct to Sharpsburgh—which is nearly three miles west of the river, at the point where the road crosses it; the battle-field is on both sides of that road—between the river and Sharpsburgh—the bulk of it being north of the Boonsboro' road, and in the triangle formed by the roads connecting Bakersville and Middletown and Bakersville and Sharpsburgh. The surface is interspersed with hill and vale, and covered with cornfields and grass land, and skirting and stretching toward the centre from different points are thin belts of forest trees—all of which gives advantage to the enemy acting on the defensive, he having an opportunity to select his position for defensive operations, and when forced from one position he has only to fall back a short distance to find a position naturally as strong as the first. The engagement was opened early Wednesday morning by the advance of a strong line of our skirmishers. They were met by a similar movement on the part of the enemy. The latter were forced back until the right of our line (Gen. HOOKER's,) came into action with the enemy's left, commanded by Gen. HILL, who commands a portion of LONGSTREET's corps. BANKS' corps was, within a half an hour, at work, and was followed soon after by Gen. PATTERSON's command. The first fire was at about 5 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock the infantry arm entered upon its work. The line thus formed, for nearly three miles from the ford, where the bulk of our troops crossed the creek before 8 o'clock, when they were relieved by Gen. SEDGWICK's coming to the front. Just previous to this, MEADE' Brigade, of HOOKER's command, had advanced from a belt of timber across a plowed field into a piece of woods, where the enemy, massed in great force, were repulsed, and the troops fell back to the belt of timber in some disorder, but were rallied again, and regained the field in front. It was at this time that Gen. MANSFIELD, in command of Gen. BANKS' corps, was mortally wounded, carried from the field and died soon afterward. Gen. WILLIAMS succeeded to the command of the corps, and Gen. CRAWFORD took command of WILLIAMS' Divisions until he was wounded and taken from the field. The repulse of MEADE' Brigade was accomplished by an old and contemptible trick of the enemy. As the corps advanced to the woods across the plowed field, the rebels unfurled the Stars and Stripes, and waving them, cried out, "What the hell are you doing? Don't fire upon your friends!" Our troops, deceived by this ruse, ceased firing, when the rebels opened upon them a murderous volley of musketry and cross fire, and creating a temporary panic. They rallied and drove the rebels back, but it was done at a great sacrifice of life.

THE ENEMY'S LEFT WAS FORCED BACK

These troops were relieved by

coming up on their left. The enemy who had gained a point of timber extending some distance in front of our line, at the left of Gen. BANKS' corps, were driven out, and across a plowed field in front, to the timber beyond, with terrible slaughter. ARNY's battery opening upon them with great effect, strewing the ground with the dead. At one point, just on the brow of a little roll of the ground but the infantry, emerging suddenly upon the open field, supposed that it was a rebel force in waiting for them, and that not knowing friend from foe, they opened a fire upon our men, which was returned by them with a volley, and the rebels were driven back. The corps came into action by brigades, portions of it and a division—Generals Rickets and Hamilton. While preparing for action, the enemy appeared from an unexpected quarter, and opened a battle fire with a view of breaking the line by a sudden attack with cavalry and infantry, not believing that it was composed of raw troops. But they soon discovered their mistake; these veterans, notwithstanding the sudden attack, though their lines were broken for a moment, were not demoralized, but received it with cheers. While under this galling fire the 7th Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers made a dash forward and seized the battle-flag of one of Gen. Hatch's regiments, and now have it to show to their friends as a trophy of the day. In this connection it should be mentioned that Capt. HOWE and Lieut. WARNER, of Gen. SEDGWICK's Staff, distinguished themselves in the action by rallying the left of Gen. SEDGWICK's division, and on several occasions, by their example, they encouraged the men in discharging their duties faithfully. Gen. SEDGWICK's horse was killed, and he was wounded twice, but remained on the field until he was removed to the rear with his command.

FRENCH'S DIVISION.

The division under Gen. FRENCH succeeded a portion to the left of SEDGWICK's, and was fairly engaged by 10½ o'clock. The fighting on the extreme right at this time was constant musketry to destroy, while the tide of infantry fighting swept along toward the left of our line. The left of this division gave way and fell back from the superior force they had to contend against—the rebel battle yelling well well after them. The left fell back in pretty good order, and, upon a vigorous rallying, gained a line of musketry to be cross depelled. This movement was evidently no fault of the men. The rebels advanced upon them, and they found themselves in the rear of our line at that point. Gen. HOOKER (acting Brigadier-General in Gen. HOOKER's Division) changed his front, and poured in several volleys upon their flank, strewing the ground with dead. The division, bestered somewhat by a cross fire from AYER's battery, fell in utter disorder. The left of FRENCH's Division advanced again, and fought like heroes until ordered to the rear.

RICHARDSON'S DIVISION.

Three Brigades of this Division, commanded by Gen. MEAGHER, Gen. CALDWELL and Col. BURT, Tenth Pennsylvania, did not cross the creek until Wednesday morning, when Gen. RICHARDSON was ordered to form on the left of FRENCH's Division. The Division crossed the river and moved up with alacrity near the line of battle, ready for action. Having filed about through the valleys to avoid letting the enemy know of the movement, the Division laid down under the brow of a hill, just in rear of the line of battle, until wanted. It was now about 9 o'clock.

THE IRISH BRIGADE.

In less than half an hour after taking this position Gen. MEAGHER was ordered to enter the line with the Irish Brigade. They marched up to the brow of the hill, cheering as they went, led by Gen. MEAGHER in person, and were welcomed with cheers by FRENCH's Brigade. The MEAGHERS fighting at this point was the severest and most deadly ever witnessed before—so acknowledged by veterans in the service. Men on both sides fell in large numbers every moment, and those who were eye-witnesses of the struggle did not suppose it possible for a single man to escape. The enemy here, at first, were concealed behind a knoll, so that only their heads were exposed. The brigade advanced up the slope with a cheer, when a most deadly fire was poured in by a second line of the enemy concealed in the Sharpsburgh road, which at this place is several feet lower than the surrounding surface, forming a complete rifle pit, and also from a force partially concealed still farther to the rear.

At this time the color-bearer in the right wing advanced several paces to the front, and defiantly waved his flag in the face of the enemy; as if by a miracle, he escaped without serious injury.

The line of the brigade, in its advance up the hill was broken in the centre temporarily by an obstruction, the right wing having advanced to keep up with the colors, and fell back a short distance, when Gen. MEAGHER directed that a rail fence which the enemy a few minutes before had been fighting behind should be torn down. His men, in face of a galling fire, obeyed the order which the whole brigade advanced to the brow the hill, cheering as the went and causing the enemy to fall back to their second line—the Sharpsburgh road, which is some three feet lower than the surrounding surface. In this road were massed a large force of infantry, and here was the most body contested point of the day. Each brigade of this Division was in turn brought into action at this point and the struggle was truly terrific for more than four hours—the enemy finally, however, were forced from their position. In this work the New-York German Battery, stationed on the hill across the Creek, rendered efficient service by pouring in upon their massed forces a concentrated stream of 20-pound shells.

Gen. CALDWELL's Brigade was next ordered into action by Gen. RICHARDSON in person. They moved forward in good order, cheering, and were received with cheers by the Irish Brigade. It was at about this time that the left of FRENCH's Division, commanded by Col. BROOKE, of the Tenth Pennsylvania, was directed by Gen. RICHARDSON to wheel to the right, and a murderous flanking fire was poured into the flank of an advancing division of the enemy, causing him to reel, and fall back in disorder.

This division was actively engaged for nearly five hours, and lost nearly half of the men taken into action.

The fight, which had opened by five o'clock in the morning, gradually crept down to the left of the main line, where it opened at about 9 o'clock. Soon after this time, Gen. RICHARDSON's guns were heard on the extreme left, on the flank of the enemy, he having obtained possession of the stone bridge across the creek on the Sharpsburgh road. This seemed to surprise the rebels, and a desperate effort was made to change their line of battle so as to repel the flanking movement on their right. To this end their line was extended, and large columns of infantry were thrown off to meet Gen. RICHARDSON, so that by 12 o'clock the rebel line of battle, having been forced back on the right, was crescent shape. Toward night our infantry got to work on the extreme left, the rebel reinforcements were at all points—but to some avail, and the day's fighting was brought to a close by a heavy artillery fire—that

THE BATTLE OF WEDNESDAY.

Another Detailed Account of the Great Struggle.

From the Albany Evening Journal, Wednesday Evening, Sept. 17, 1862.

Warren and Greenbrier hearts between 200,000 men has raged since daylight, yet night closes on an undecided field. It is the greatest fight since Waterloo—all over the field contested with an obstinacy equal even to Waterloo. If not actually a victory to-night, I believe it is the prelude to a victory to-morrow. But what can be foretold of the future of a fight in which from 5 in the morning till 7 at night the best troops of the continent have fought without decisive result?

I have not time for speculation—not time even to gather details of the battle—only time to make its broadest features—then mount and spur for New-York.

After the brilliant victory near SHARPSBURGH, Gen. McCLELLAN pushed forward his army rapidly, and reached Keedysville with timely corps on Monday night. That night, he himself been dispatched. On the day following, the two armies faced each other idly, until night. Artillery was busy at intervals; once in the morning, opening with spirit, and continuing for half an hour with vigor, till the rebel battery, on a ridge, was silenced.

McCLELLAN was on the hill where FRANKLIN's battery was stationed, and found himself suddenly under a rather heavy fire. It was still uncertain whether the rebels meditated an advance—their batteries would require no question in either case, and as they had withdrawn from nearly all their troops from view, there was only the doubtful indication of submission of danger signals.

On the evening of Tuesday, SUMNER was ordered to cross the Antietam Creek with his corps, and, feeling the left of the enemy, be ready to attack next morning. During the day of apparent inactivity, McCLELLAN had been maturing his plan of battle, of which HOOKER's movement was one development.

The position on either side was peculiar. When HOOKER advanced on Monday he found the enemy deployed and displayed in force on a semi-circle ridge, the outline of which followed more or less exactly the course of Antietam Creek. Their lines were then fleeting and the revelation of force in front of the ground which they really intended to hold, was probably merely to delay our attack until their arrangements to receive it were complete.

During the day they kept their troops concealed and did not move them, even to avoid the artillery fire, which must have been occasionally annoying. Next morning the lines and columns which had darkened cornfields and hill crests, had been withdrawn. Broken and wooded ground behind the sheltering hills concealed the rebel masses. What from our front looked like only a narrow summit fringed with woods, was a broad table-land of forest and ravine, cover for troops everywhere, nowhere easy access for an enemy. The smoothly-sloping surface in front and the sweeping crescent of slowly winding lines was all a delusion. It was all a rebel stronghold beyond.

Under the base of these hills runs the deep stream called Antietam Creek, fordable only at distant points. Three bridges cross it, one on the Hagerstown road, one on the Sharpsburgh, plus one to the left in a deep recess of steeply falling hills. HOOKER passed the first to reach the ford by which he crossed, and it was held by PLEASANTON with a reserve of cavalry during the battle. The second was close under the rebel centre, and no way important to yesterday's fight. At the third BURNSIDE attacked and finally crossed. Between the first and third lay most of the battle lines. They stretched four miles from right to left.

Unaided, attack in front was hopeless. McCLELLAN's forces lay behind low, concealed ridges, in front of the rebel summits, all, or nearly all, unwooded. They gave some cover for artillery, and guns were thrown forward on the centre. The enemy had the Shepherdstown road and the Hagerstown and Williamsport road both open to him in rear for retreat. Along one or the other, if beaten, he must fly. This, among other reasons, determined, perhaps, the plan of battle which McCLELLAN finally received on.

The plan was generally as follows: HOOKER was to cross on the right, establish himself on the enemy's left if possible, flanking his position, and so open the fight. SUMNER, FRANKLIN and MANSFIELD were to send their forces also to the right, cooperating with and sustaining HOOKER's attack while advancing also nearer the centre. The heavy work in the centre was left mostly to the batteries. PORTER massing his infantry support in the hollows. On the left BURNSIDE was to carry the bridge already referred to, following then by a rush which cases the rebel flank and destroying his line of retreat. PORTER and SYKES were held in reserve. It is obvious that the complete success of a plan contemplating widely divergent movements of separate corps, must largely depend on accurate timing, that the attack should be simultaneous and not successive.

HOOKER moved Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, crossing the creek at a ford above the bridge and well to the right, without opposition, marching southwest his line advanced not quite on the rebel flank, but overlapping and threatening it. Turning off from the road after passing the stream, he sent forth cavalry skirmishers pushing into the woods and over the fields, where the rebels withdrew slowly before them, firing continuously and harmless shots. Turning again to the left, the cavalry went down on the rebel flank, coming suddenly close to a battery which met them with unexpected grape and canister, forcing the retire of cavalry to retire before battery, this company largely followed the fate of its being, and came swiftly back without wounds.

Artillery was sent to the front, battery was rapidly deployed, and skirmishers were sent in in front on either flank. The corps moved forward cautiously, HOOKER, as usual, directing in person. They came on, fire in the open grass-covered fields, reached the woods, protected on the right by a rail fence, entered through a considerable in the open, and were entering those woods when suddenly fire by rebel shots, but held their ground, and soon supported, advanced, and cleared the woods. Beyond, on the left and in front, valleys of cornfields opened, heavily, and a battle commenced, to have for gun a little sooner than it was commenced.

Gen. HOOKER formed his lines with precision and without hesitation. Ricketts's division went into the woods on the left in force, [illegible], with the Pennsylvania Reserve, formed in the centre. DOUBLEDAY was sent out on the right, planting his batteries on the hill, and opening his central rebel battery that began to enfilade our central line. It was already dark, and the smoke of their guns could only be discovered by the flashes of their guns. They pushed forward heavily on the right, after losing ground on the extreme left, and made no attempt to regain their hold on the woods. The light flashed, and gleamed and faded, and finally went out in the dark.

HOOKER had found out what he wanted to

[illegible] Where the fight ceased the Sedition Staff lay close to each other—their pickets to meet each other. Six rebels were captured during the night. It was inevitable that the fight should recommence at daylight. Neither side had suffered considerable loss; it was a skirmish, not a battle. "We are through for to-night," remarked the General, "but to-morrow we fight the battle that will decide the fate of the Republic."

[illegible] Hooker, who had retreated, it sprang up again on the left. Gen. Hooker, who had taken [illegible] the fierce artillery fire was cut at [illegible] rapid and unceasingly frequent picket shots, then several heavy volleys. The General listened a moment and called briskly [illegible] "The rebels are shooting each other. It is Fair Oaks over again." So everybody lay down again, but all the night through there were frequent alarms.

McClellan had been informed of the night's work, and the certainties awaiting the dawn. [illegible] was ordered to move his corps at once. [illegible] was expected to be on the ground at daylight. [illegible] the extent of the rebel lines developed in the evening, it was plain that they had gathered their whole army behind the heights, and were waiting for the shock.

The battle began with the dawn. Morning [illegible] both armies just as they had slept, almost [illegible] enough to look into each other's eyes. The [illegible] of Mason's reserves and the right of Buckingham's [illegible] became engaged at nearly the same moment, one with artillery, the other with infantry. A battery was almost immediately pushed forward beyond the general woods, over a ploughed field, near the top of the slope where the cornfield begins. On the open field in the [illegible] beyond, and in the woods which stopped forward beyond the broad fields, this a promontory into the ocean, was the hardest and deadliest struggle of the day.

For half an hour after the battle had grown to its full strength, the line of fire swayed neither [illegible] way. Hooker's men were fully up to their work. They saw their General everywhere in front. [illegible] only pause the first and all the troops behaved in their commendable and fought with the [illegible] of them were the same men who had [illegible] McDowell had broken at Manassas.

The first hour passed, the rebels began to give [illegible] way; it was only a little, but at the first indication of a receding fire, Forward, was the word. [illegible] on went the line with a cheer and a rush. Back across the cornfield, leaving dead and [illegible] behind them, over the fence, and across [illegible] and then back again into the dark [illegible] which seemed them were the pr[illegible]

Meade and his Pennsylvanians followed hard [illegible] the rebels followed till they came within easy range of the woods, among which they saw their [illegible] enemy disappearing followed still, with another cheer, and hung themselves against the [illegible]

But out of those gloomy woods came, suddenly [illegible] heavily, terrible volleys—volleys which smote [illegible] heads, and broke, in a moment, that eager [illegible] and hurled them swiftly back for half the distance they had went. Not swiftly, nor in [illegible], any further. Closing up their shattered lines, they came slowly away—a regiment where a brigade had been, hardly a brigade where a [illegible] division had been victorious. They had met from the woods the first volleys of musketry from fresh troops—had met them and returned [illegible] till their fire had yielded and gone down before the weight of fire, and till the ammunition was exhausted.

In ten minutes the fortunes of the day seemed to have changed—it was the rebels now who were advancing, pouring out of the woods in endless [illegible] sweeping through the turn-field from which their comrades just fled. Hooker sent in his reserve brigade to meet them, but it could not do the work. He called for another. There was nothing close enough, unless he took it from his right. His right might be in danger if it was [illegible], but his centre was already threatened with annihilation. Not hesitating one moment, he sent to Doubleday. "Give me your best brigade instantly."

The best brigade came down the hill to the [illegible] battle line, went through the timber in front [illegible] a storm of shot, and bursting shell and crashing limbs, over the open field beyond, and straight into the corn-field, passing as they went [illegible] Brigades shattered by the rebel fire, and [illegible] the rest. They passed by Hooker, [illegible] eyes lighted as he saw these veteran troops led by a soldier whom he knew he could trust. "I think they will hold it," he said.

Gen. Hartsuff took his troops very steadily, [illegible] as they were under fire, not hurriedly, [illegible] the hill from which the corn-field begins to descend, and formed them on the crest. Not a man who was not in full view—not one who heard [illegible] the storm. Firing at first in volleys, they fired them as will with wonderful rapidity and [illegible]. The whole line crowned the hill and stood out darkly against the sky, but lighted and shrouded [illegible] ever in flame and smoke. These were the Twelfth and Thirteenth Massachusetts—old troops [illegible]

[illegible] half an hour they held the ridge, unyielding in purpose, exhaustless in courage. There were gaps in the line, but it nowhere dwelt. Their General was wounded badly early in the fight, but they fought on. Their supports did not come—they determined to fight without them. They began to go down the hill and into the corn. They did not stop to think that their ammunition was nearly gone, they were there to win that field, and they won it. The rebel line for the second time fled through the corn and into the woods. I cannot tell how few of Hartsuff's Brigade were left when the work was done, but it was done. There was no more gallant, determined heroic fighting in all this desperate day. Gen. Hartsuff is very severely wounded, but I do not believe he counts his success too dearly purchased.

The crisis of the fight at this point had arrived; Hooker's division, vainly endeavoring to advance, and exhausted by the effort, had fallen back. Part of Mansfield's corps was ordered to the rear of the rebel, but Mansfield's troops came back again, and their General was mortally wounded. The left, nevertheless, was too extended to be turned, and too strong to be broken. Hooker's sent word he could not advance, but could hold his ground. Doubleday had kept his guns at work on the left, and had finally silenced a rebel battery that for half an hour had poured in a galling enfilading fire along Hooker's central line.

There was woods in front of Doubleday's hill which the rebels held, but so long as those guns [illegible] that way they did not care to attack. [illegible] left them able to take care of itself with [illegible] impregnable with two brigades of Hartsuff's still fresh and coming rapidly up, and with [illegible] about time victorious Gen. Hooker determined to advance. Orders were sent to Crawford and Gordon—the two Mansfield brigades—to move directly forward at once, the [illegible] in the centre were ordered on, the whole line was called on, and the General himself went [illegible]

To the right of the cornfield and beyond it was a [illegible] of woods. Once carried and firmly held, [illegible] the key of the position. Hooker desired [illegible] to take it. He rode out in front of his fa[illegible] to examine the ground for [illegible] fire. At the top he dismounted and went [illegible] on foot, completed his reconnoissance, [illegible] and remounted. The musketry fire [illegible] the point of woods was all the while ex[illegible] As he put his foot in the stirrup a [illegible] of wild bullets came whistling by, [illegible] the unlucky figure of the General, the white [illegible] which he rode, the elevated place where he [illegible] made him a most dangerously conspicuous target. So he had been all day, riding often [illegible] staff officer near an orderly near him—[illegible] on urgent duty—visible everywhere [illegible] the rebel bullets had followed him [illegible] they had not hit him and he would [illegible] them. Dismounting on this hill he had [illegible] five steps where he was struck in the [illegible] ball.

[illegible] shot down at the same moment [illegible] was alive with bullets. He [illegible] there for a few moments, though the [illegible] was severe and excessively painful, and [illegible] disabled till he had given his last [illegible] orders. He was himself in the very [illegible] painfully on his horse, he turned [illegible] his seat to look about him. "There is a [illegible] to the right. Order it forward! Crawford and Gordon are coming up. Tell them to carry those works and hold them—and it is our [illegible]

It was found that the bullet had passed completely through his foot. The surgeon who examined it on the spot could give no opinion whether bones were broken, but it was afterward ascertained that though grazed, they were not fractured. Of course, the severity of the wound made it impossible for him to keep the field which he believed already won, so far as it belonged to him to win it. It was 9 o'clock. The fight had been furious since 5. A large part of his com-

[illegible] the rebel lines [illegible] Hooker. [illegible] Nothing of all [illegible] the hills in front. Some detachments of the rebel [illegible] had been disclosed by the smoke of their guns, but the whole interior formation of the country, beyond the hills—was completely concealed.

When McClellan arranged his order of battle, it might have been known, if anyone had been left to his corps and division commanders to dis-

Up to 1 o'clock Burnside had made little progress. His attack on the bridge had been successful, but the delay had been so great that to the observer it appeared as if McClellan's plans must have been seriously disarranged. It is impossible not to suppose that the attacks on right and left were meant to be simultaneous, for otherwise the enemy had only to repel Hooker on the one hand, then transfer his troops and push them against Burnside.

Here was the difference between Sumner and Burnside. The former did his work at once, and lost all his men at once—that is, all whom he lost at all; Burnside seems to have attacked cautiously, in order to save his men, but sending successively insufficient forces against a position of strength, distributed his loss over a greater period of time, but yet lost none the less in the end.

Finally, at 4 o'clock, McClellan sent simultaneous orders to Burnside and Franklin—to the former to advance and carry the batteries in his front at all hazards and say cost; to the latter to carry the woods next in front of him to the left, which the rebels still held. The order to Franklin, however, was practically countermanded, in consequence of a message from Gen. Sumner that if Franklin went on and was repulsed, his own corps was not yet sufficiently reorganized to be depended on as a reserve.

Franklin, thereupon, was directed to run no risk of losing his present position, and, instead of sending his infantry into the woods, contented himself with advancing his batteries over the breadth of the fields in front, supporting them with heavy columns of infantry, and attacking with energy the rebel batteries immediately opposed to him. His movement was a success, so far as it went, the batteries maintaining their new ground, and sensibly affecting the steadiness of the rebel fire. That being once accomplished, and all hazard of the right being again forced back having been dispelled, the movement of Burnside became at once the turning-point of success, and the fate of the day depended on him.

How extraordinary the situation was may be judged from a moment's consideration of the facts. It is understood that from the outset Burnside's attack was expected to be decisive, as it certainly must have been if things went well elsewhere, and if he succeeded in establishing himself on the Sharpsburgh road in the rebel rear.

Gens. Hooker, and Sumner, and Franklin, and Mansfield were all sent to the right three miles away, while Porter seems to have done double duty with his single corps in front, both supporting the batteries and holding himself in reserve. With all this immense force on the right, but 14,000 were given to Burnside for the decisive movement of the day.

Still more unfortunate in its results was the total failure of these separate attacks on the right and left to sustain, or in any manner cooperate with each other. Burnside hesitated for hours in front of the bridge which should have been carried at once by a coup de main. Meantime Hooker had been fighting for four hours with various fortune, but final success. Sumner had come up too late to join in the decisive attack which his earlier arrival would probably have counted into a complete success; and Franklin reached the scene only when Sumner had been repulsed. Probably before his arrival the rebels had transferred a considerable number of troops to their right to meet the attack of Burnside, the direction of which was then suspected or developed.

Attacking first with one regiment, then with two, and delaying both for artillery, Burnside was not over the bridge before 2 o'clock—perhaps not till 3. He advanced slowly up the slopes in his front, his batteries in rear covering, to some extent, the movement of the infantry. A desperate fight was going on in a deep ravine on his right, the rebel batteries were in full play, and, apparently, very annoying and destructive, while heavy columns of rebel troops were plainly visible, advancing as if careless of concealment, along the road and over the hills in the direction of Burnside's forces. It was at this point of time that McClellan sent him the order above given.

Burnside obeyed it most gallantly. Getting his troops well in hand, and sending a portion of his artillery to the front, he advanced them, with rapidity and the most determined vigor, straight up the hill in front, on top of which the rebels had maintained their most dangerous battery. The movement was in plain view of McClellan's position, and as Franklin, on the other side, sent his batteries into the field about the same time, the battle seemed to open in all directions with greater activity than ever.

The fight in the ravine was in full progress, the batteries which Porter supported were firing with new vigor, Franklin was blazing away on the right and hill-top, ridge and woods along the whole line was crested and veiled with white clouds of smoke. All day had been clear and bright since the early cloudy morning, and now this whole magnificent, unequaled scene shone with the splendor of an afternoon September sun. Four miles of battle, its glory all visible, its horrors all hidden, the fate of the Republic hanging on the hour—could any one be insensible of its grandeur!

There are two hills on the left of the road, the furthest and lowest. The rebels have batteries on both. Burnside is ordered to carry the nearest to him, which is the furthest from the road. His guns opening first from this new position in front, more entirely controlled and silenced the enemy's artillery. The infantry came on at once, moving rapidly and steadily up long, dark lanes, and broad, dark recesses, being plainly visible without a glass as they moved over the green hillside.

The next moment the road in which the rebel battery was planted was canopied with clouds of dust swiftly descending into the valley. Underneath was a tumult of wagons, guns, horses and men flying at speed down the road. Blue flashes of smoke burst now and then among them, a horse or a man or half a dozen went down, and then the whirlwind swept on.

The hill was carried, but could it be held? The rebel columns, before seen moving to the left, increased their pace. The guns on the hill above send an angry tempest of shell down among Burnside's guns and men. He had formed his columns apparently in the near angles of two fields bordering the road—high ground, about them everywhere, except in rear.

In another moment a rebel battle line appears on the brow of the ridge above them, moves swiftly down in the most perfect order, and though met by incessant discharges of musketry, of which we plainly see the flashes, does not fire a gun. White spaces show where men are falling, but they close up instantly, and still the line advances. The brigades of Burnside are in heavy column; they will not give way before a bayonet charge in line. The rebels think twice, before they dash into these hostile masses.

There is a halt, the rebel left gives way and scatters over the field, the rest stand fast and fire. More infantry comes up, Burnside is outnumbered; flanked, compelled to yield the hill he took so bravely. His position is no longer one of attack; he defends himself with unflinching firmness, but he sends to McClellan for help. McClellan's glass for the last half hour has seldom been turned away from the left.

He sees clearly enough that Burnside is pressed—needs no messenger to tell him that. His face grows darker with anxious thought. Looking down into the valley where 15,000 troops are lying he turns a half-questioning look on Fitz-John Porter, who stands by his side, gravely scanning the field. They are Porter's troops below, are fresh and only impatient to share in this fight. But Porter slowly shakes his head and one may believe that the same thought is passing through the minds of both Generals. "They are the only heroes of the army; they cannot be spared."

McClellan remounts his horse, and, with Porter and a dozen officers of his Staff, rides away to the left, in Burnside's direction. Byrne meets them on the road—a good soldier, whom opinion is worth taking. The three Generals talk briefly together. It is easy to see that the moment has come when everything may turn on one order given or withheld, when the history of the battle is only to be written in thoughts, and purposes, and words of the General.

Burnside's messenger rode up. His message is: "I want troops and guns. If you do not send them, I cannot hold my position for half an hour." McClellan's only answer for the moment, is a glance at the western sky. Then he turns and speaks very slowly: "Tell Gen. Burnside that Wear and Tear of Military Life.

[illegible] and the persistent appearance of an enlightened policy, practiced through a long course of years, Mr. Wallack has raised the theatre he manages to a position of public estimation, from which it only not (individually) he said to look down upon the other theatres of the earth as a benign examiner. Abandoning from aggressive attempts at rivalry, and seemingly all apparent ambition of competition, Mr. Wallack has quietly acquired a commanding influence in the theatrical world which other managers do not affect to gainsay, which the profession generally acknowledges as a matter of course, and which the play-going community appreciates without stopping to analyze the cause of its satisfaction. The opening of Mr. Wallack's theatre for the season, is to a large million of persons, of more consequence than the opening of all the other theatres put together. People of fashion regard it as an event by which to reckon the proper time for coming back from watering places to the City. Footlights people look forward to it as to a dramatic dawn which shall disperse the clouds of social night they went to sit in the caverns of dreadfulness upstairs. With a select but extensive circle Wallack's is the only attraction of, or for the Opera. In a circle more promiscuous, but with a dogma has generated to the effect that it is the best house of its class there and thereabouts—the dual link which binds the degenerate present to the golden past. Other theatres may have more attractive companies—may produce more alluring pieces—may appeal more potently to passing passions—may stick to fashion with consistent performance of more radiant realities; but at Wallack's—this theatre many people think—there is a constancy of smooth and equable performance of variable, but sustained ability—of careful, yet not prudish, pretty—that more than counterbalances all the fascinating charms of other places, and thereon splendid as extraordinary inducements.

It is well that fancies and opinions differ. Were it otherwise—if every one felt as the subject of the theatre like that portion of the public here referred to—if the other theatres never existed, or, Mr. Wallack would have to take them all. Happily for society it is compounded of more elements than the balance of the universe in which it moves; and, being so compounded, each pet can find its manner medium best suits it, or one or more can mingle without danger of attrition. There are elements enough in the Metropolis to range from the Academy of Music to the Old Bowery, and then find themselves short of accommodation. What then, though Mr. Wallack does have tremendous audiences of a certain order of intelligence and brilliancy, nightly, for the next eight months: there are other audiences of intelligence and brilliancy, in their degrees, to make Miss Keene content, and Mr. Bateman's heart with joy, and crowd the halls of Niblo. Everybody does not prefer Mr. Lester Wallack to Mr. Forrest, and there are folk who would rather see the gorgeous tableaux of a fairy spectacle than feast their minds upon a sparkling five-act comedy.

Nevertheless, the five-act comedies will hold their own; and that species of entertainment Mr. Wallack can present in a manner that forbids the thought of competition. Last season he carried himself through with them triumphantly, and this season he has wisely commenced with them again. He selected "The Love Chase" by way of inaugural. The piece having been played several times before, it is not now open to criticism; and the same actors and actresses to whom he distributes the characters in it are the actors and actresses to whom those characters were distributed four months ago, the occasion has passed for expatiating on their several merits and defects. It is only necessary to state how the piece and the players were received. The house was crowded. To a considerable extent it was filled with the same people who will attend constantly throughout the Fall and Winter. Every performer, as he or she came upon the stage, was recognized as an old friend and favorite, and was greeted accordingly. Applause was generous and prolonged, without being noisy, and bouquets were plentiful but discriminating. Mrs. Hoey is brilliant, finished, faultless; Miss Gannon natural and piquant; Miss Hazelhurst fresh and charming as ever. It is impossible to bestow compliments on men; yet Mr. Lester Wallack, Mr. Mark Smith, and others, who sustained the masculine share of the performance, deserve them. Everything passed off delightfully, and seemed to bear the promise of a prosperous future. The theatre itself looks bright and pleasant. A new drop-curtain has been painted, and is a decided improvement on the old one. The orchestra is full and efficient, and, under Mr. Rosier Stoepel's able conduct, supplies the choicest music to be heard outside of the Academy.

Arrival and Departure of Troops.

RETURN OF THE TWELFTH—RECEPTION BY THE COMMON COUNCIL.

About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Twelfth Regiment, New-York State Militia, arrived at Pier No. 2, North River, under, but from thence marched up Broadway to the Park.

The Twelfth was one of the militia regiments belonging to this City which promptly proved the call made by Secretary Stanton for three months troops for the defence of the Capital. It was stationed at Harper's Ferry, and for a long time did pleasant garrison duty; but when the rebels made their late dash upon Washington, following up with the capture of Maryland and Pennsylvania, the Twelfth found that Harper's Ferry, neither arts nor arguments of men that could be mustered, had to surrender, and instead of coming home, enlistments to stay next the week, came to expire before a regiment of them until the danger was past. They endured all the perils of the siege like heroes, behaving splendidly, and escaping and were approached and subsequently [illegible] which the surrender took place they were, with the rest of the garrison, marched off as prisoners and paroled. And now they return to the City, crowd and cheer, and soon the men crowded with [illegible] the chance of war placed their lot [illegible] whose defeat was so far as they were concerned inevitable.

The rich of the Twelfth, when paroled, were deprived of their arms and cartridge cases, but they retained their knapsacks and uniforms, and looked accordingly worthy their progress along the streets. They are somewhat disciplined and exceedingly thoughtful. They declare that Harper's Ferry was surrendered through treachery, and that [illegible] go [illegible] that [illegible] Maryland [illegible] Harper's Ferry [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] Fourth Battalion—Major Joseph Spratt.

Military Movements in the City.

PROGRESS OF ENLISTMENTS—MUSTERING OFFICER.

Volunteering, all over the City, was brisk on Thursday, and has been brisk ever since. Recruiting officers and agents of all kinds to be found to all the willing applicants, who called upon them, and both Recruiting Stations and the United States officials in White-street, were kept busy from early morn to sunset, enrolling men, passing the men thus brought into them. At Willis-street, in particular, Capt. Lazear, Lieut. Kemmer, and Dr. Moore and his assistants have almost passed, and yet there have such an immense (and, as everybody thinks, unnecessary) number of men to be sent to pass a single individual who offers himself for service. Sixteen papers per volunteer certainly does cover a little of the circumlocution. Because Master-of-fact people might fancy the thing could be done more promptly, and with not quite so much inconvenience.

[illegible] PAYMENT OF REGIMENTS.

Notwithstanding repeated official warnings that payment of drafted regiments should be stopped, none have been yet, that is, to regiments in the field. Recruits for new regiments only get the City bounty of $50, and such private bounties as friends of particular organizations may subscribe. Those for the old regiments, in the field, get the United States and State bounties, and the $50 City bounty. The United States and State bounties are paid with commutation rations, and are payable upon the volunteer's certificate of enlistment.

THE RAGGED ARTILLERY.

This organization, which has developed into marked proportions, out of the competitive drill of the New-York Naval Brigade, is now transferred to Newbern, N. C., under command of Col. Havens, and is one of the rebel water corps in the sounds. It is in an admirable state of discipline and drill, and is employed on the most important expeditions along the coast. It combines the characteristics of land and maritime service, dealing alike with boatmen in boats, or marching here and there with the land forces. It is organized after the model of the Italian Marine Artillery, and is a most apt arm in the defence of the English coast. The corps is now full, Lieuts. Hamor and Thayer are leaving yesterday with 227 men, enough to bring it up to the highest number required.

[illegible] AID SOCIETY.

Following the example of the New-England and other States, citizens of Massachusetts resident in New-York, have organized a Soldier's Aid Society to care for the welfare of the sick and wounded belonging to their State brought on here. E. H. Rulz is President, and Mr. A. T. Maurice, Secretary, with the following Committee: Dwight Clary, Dr. Geo. Cheever, G. W. Thomas, D. C. Langley, Geo. H. Jarvis, W. C. Stevens, W. W. Davis, C. T. Gilbert and G. C. Globe. Mr. Clark is the agent, at No. 173 Broadway. There are about 300 sick and wounded Michigan soldiers in this City now. They are well cared for, but will be none the worse off from little special comfort and attention.

MEETING IN BEHALF OF THE IRONSIDES REGIMENT.

In the Seventh-avenue M. E. Church, on Thursday evening last, a meeting was held on behalf of the Ironsides Regiment—Rev. E. F. Marsh's church. The church was crowded, and the deepest interest was manifested. Col. Charles Gould, Rev. Dr. Gillette, Rev. Prof. Kinney, Mr. Barnes, Col. Anderson, of Kentucky, Dr. Hitchcock and Rev. Dr. Michaels addressed the meeting. All of them were men of the most earnest and determined character, urging the utmost vigor in the prosecution of the war. Dr. Hitchcock stated his creed in substance as the war to be "wet prayers and dry powder." On Monday evening next another meeting will be held in the church corner of Bedford and Downing streets, at 7½ o'clock. Several interesting speakers are expected to address the meeting.

STANTON LEGION.

This regiment has not left as expected. It is in fine condition, however, and will get off in a day or two. It is not yet quite up to the maximum number, and opportunity still exists for recruits to join one or two of the best companies. Money was paid in camp yesterday, 40 officers being on hand distributing bounties.

THE LINDSAY BLUES.

This well-known company [illegible] the war. A recruiting station has been opened at No. 49 Division-street, where men are wanted to join a battalion [illegible] Lieut. Col. Jno. B. Lindsay. The Blues will join the Metropolitan Brigade. A Financial Committee has been formed of which Lieut.-Col. Wheaty and Capt. McCoun, Treasurer, and Q. and B. Rodgers are members.

[illegible] BOUNTIES.

Messrs. Evans & Sons, No. 7 Jacob-street, will give ten dollars each to the first ten men joining Company E, Second Fire Zouaves, Fourth Regiment Militia, Colonel Cox. Wm. B. Southerland, Mayor, will be paid on mustering by Recruiting Officer, Lieut. Roman D. Walker.

Chamberlain Devlin to the Board of Aldermen.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

By the published reports of the proceedings of your body of the 8th inst., it appears that a resolution was submitted by Alderman Ryan, and referred to a Select Committee, continuing a general charge of defendant of date on account, as Chamberlain, and providing for my removal from office.

I take the liberty of calling the attention of your honorable body—which is not vested with any power in regard to my removal—to the following act of the Legislature of 1861:

SECTION 1. The Chamberlain of the City of New-York shall hold his office for the term of three years from the time of his appointment, and until his successor shall be duly appointed and qualified, and shall be subject to removal from office only for the causes and in the manner, by the authority and by the proceedings now provided by law for the removal of the Mayor, Comptroller and Corporation Counsel of said City, and his successor shall be chosen on the 24th day of December, 1862, shall hold his office for the term above provided, and shall be subject to removal therefrom in the same manner.

It is unnecessary for me to remark to gentlemen so familiar with the City Charter, that [illegible] the members of your body, that the Chamberlain is vested with the power to remove the Mayor, Comptroller, Counsel.

Notwithstanding the exemption that thus exists, my respect for my personal reputation compelled me to demand an investigation into the charges made by the Committee of City Chamberlain, during the administration of Mr. Wood. At the same time, however, I confident [illegible] the distinct [illegible] of the derelictions of duty upon which the above resolutions were based, to state that I [illegible] I am quite clear, and that I may have an opportunity of examining the evidence.

Very respectfully, &c.,

DANIEL DEVLIN, Chamberlain.

A MAN WITH TWO WIVES.—James H. Hanner, a boatbuilder, aged thirty-eight years, residing on the corner of Hudson and North Moore streets, was arrested, yesterday, upon the complaint of Wm. P. Francisco, of Brooklyn, who made oath that the accused was the husband of one whom, both of whom are now living in this City. The complainant says that sixteen years ago the prisoner was married to Lucy Ann Hubbard, and on Sunday last Esther Queen, of St. Peter's Church, in Barclay-street, united the accused and Mary Owen in the bonds of matrimony. Justice Pamerene committed Hanner, in default of $500 bail.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Military Camp at Newark.

This camp, now situated a short distance from Newark City, on the road to Orange, presents a very animating and busy aspect. There are at present nearly three thousand men in camp, anxious to hasten to the war, but are kept still in camp until they are fully equipped and armed. The State Government, with that at headquarters in Washington, have determined that this barrier to loyal loving Union men, shall not long lie in the way of the heroes of the State of New-Jersey, who, since the campaign commenced, have never flagged one inch in encountering the foe. These brave fellows, whose conduct in camp life has been so creditable, will not much longer be detained from taking an active part in the present momentous struggle. Everything that can be done is being done to have them at once transported to the seat of war in full compliance with the President's calls; and they will go forward in the course of a fortnight or three weeks to form an able adjunct with the great army of the Union, which is at present so manfully distinguishing itself in the cause of constitutional liberty. The soldiers are in the best of health and spirits, and express an ardent desire to be forwarded as soon as possible to participate in the honorable laurels which are now crowning the heads of the Union troops. They are principally young men, robust and stalwart, and cannot fail to do good service in the field when transported there. No drafting, it is said, will be necessary in the whole State.

TWO MEN DROWNED.—Two men named JAMES HAGGE and PATRICK SAYER, residents of Jersey City, were drowned in the East River, about 9 o'clock on Wednesday night. They were employed on board a lighter, and with the captain were in a small boat picking up some barrels of oil that had fallen overboard from the lighter, when the two men became alarmed at the near approach of a Paterson ferry-boat, and capsized the boat. A small boat was launched from the ferry-boat, and the hands made every effort to rescue the men, but were unsuccessful. The bodies have not been recovered. The ferry-boat had been stopped previous to the accident, and had the men not been frightened, the accident would not have occurred.

ARREST OF PICKPOCKETS.—Two men, named JOHN LEE and ABRAHAM GUSTAF, were taken before Recorder MATTHIAS, of Jersey City, yesterday afternoon, and committed for trial, on a charge of attempting to pick pockets. They were arrested at the depot by Officer RIDGELEY, on the evening previous, while attempting to rob an old gentleman. Upon being taken to the station-house, one of them was observed to put what was supposed to be some bills in his mouth and swallow them. His throat was tightly grasped, he succeeded in swallowing them.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR PAYING BOUNTY.—The Board of Chosen Freeholders, of Hudson County, have decided to continue paying a bounty of $50 to each recruit who enlists in the three years' regiments, to November 1st. The State, also pays $6 per month, in addition to the regular United States pay.

LAUNCH OF A NEW STEAMBOAT.—The steamboat Jacob H. Vanderbilt, just completed at the yard of M. S. ALLISON, in Jersey City, was launched on Thursday afternoon shortly after 3 o'clock in the presence of nearly 1,000 spectators, nearly one-half of whom were ladies.

LAW REPORTS.

Commodore Wilkes Sued by His Sister—Judgment in His Favor and the Case Appealed.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Clerke, Leonard, and Barnard.

Elizabeth V. Henry vs. Charles Wilkes.—This is an action brought against the defendant, Commodore Wilkes, under the following circumstances, as stated by the plaintiff and appellant:

This action was brought by Miss Elizabeth V. Henry, as assignee of her mother, Mrs. Eliza Henry, to recover $6,000 loaned by Mrs. Henry to her brother, the defendant, on the 20th of January, 1847, through the agency of Henry Wilkes, to enable the defendant to pay of a mortgage by John R. Foley to Andrew McCullum, for $1,814 on fifty-two lots on Third-avenue, etc., owned by the defendant, deeded to him by Henry Wilkes, 17th December, 1844, and which was then in course of foreclosure on a foreclosure suit of which the subpœna had been personally served on the defendant 20th October, 1846, three months before the loan in question, and the defendant had taken no steps to pay off the mortgage, which lots, if the mortgage were not paid off by that money borrowed of Mrs. Henry for the defendant, by his agent, Henry Wilkes, would have been sold and lost to the defendant, on the 20th of January, 1847, and which were worth more than four times the amount of the mortgage, and part of which loan the defendant afterwards paid to Clifton Jaudon for eight thousand dollars, and received the money, by which operation not only had his property been saved from foreclosure by the money loaned by Mrs. Henry, but, in truth, the defendant got her money in his pocket when he received the proceeds of the sale, free from the mortgage which she had paid off. The loan by Mrs. Henry to Henry Wilkes, and the particulars of it, are stated by Mrs. Henry, as a witness in her own behalf, and two receipts were produced for interest money on the loan, all from Charles Wilkes, by the hands of Henry Wilkes, on the 20th of July, 1847, and 20th January, 1848, and the evidence of Henry Wilkes.

The defendant, Capt. Wilkes, lived in Washington, Mrs. Henry in New-York. Capt. Wilkes, the defendant, had real estate in the City of New-York with rents to collect and disbursements to make, and [illegible]

Henry Wilkes being sworn for Mrs. Henry, set forth [illegible] charge of the Third-avenue lots to pay the mortgage on the property [illegible] Chief Justice Taney was analytic, but he also proved that he borrowed the money from Mrs. Henry at the defendant's request, the defendant having assumed no means whatever of paying of the mortgage then under foreclosure.

Henry Wilkes, in his accounts rendered to the defendant, showed that the defendant had knowledge of the mortgage, and had paid interest on it.

Henry Wilkes also produced two accounts against defendant, in August, 1843 and February, 1846, in which it appeared that the defendant was charged with Henry Wilkes with interest paid out of the defendant's rents, on the $2,000 borrowed for him of Mrs. Henry.

Mrs. Henry and Miss Henry also proved knowledge by the defendant of the loan made to him. The defendant also recognized a loan to him in his letters.

The theory of the defence was, that although this money was borrowed of Mrs. Henry by Henry Wilkes to pay off the mortgage on the defendant's Third-avenue lots, by which Mrs. Henry's money came to his use and benefit, yet, as between the defendant and Henry Wilkes, from other matters of business and accounts arising from them, he, Henry Wilkes, was bound to pay off that mortgage to establish that defence; the Referee, against the exception of the plaintiff, allowed the defendant, on his cross-examination of Henry Wilkes, and the direct examination of the defendant, to go into items of account of new matter and collateral, and of numerous intricate transactions and speculations, entirely losing sight of the rest in, so as to be tried before him, so that it is very apparent that when the Referee came to decide this cause, although he passed formerly in his report upon the issues before him, yet in reality, he decided them upon other matters between Charles and Henry Wilkes, which had nothing whatever to do with this case.

The power of attorney, referred to above, was made by Commodore Wilkes, while a Lieutenant in the United States Navy, and just before his departure on the South Sea Exploring Expedition, and is as follows:

Know all men by these presents, that I, Charles Wilkes, of the City of Washington, in the District of Columbia, Lieutenant in the United States Navy, being about to embark in the South Sea Exploring Expedition, have made, constituted, ordained and appointed, and by these presents do make, ordain, constitute and appoint, my wife, Jane F. Wilkes, and my brothers, Henry Wilkes and Edmund Wilkes, of the City and State of New-York, secretaries at law, to be jointly and severally my true and lawful attorneys or attorney, to whom I hereby give full power and authority for me and in my name to compound or compromise any action or suit, now pending in or hereafter to be brought by or against me, or relating to any lands or tenements in the District of Columbia; likewise to sell, assign and transfer any lands or tenements belonging to me in the State of Pennsylvania, for such price or prices as my said attorneys shall think proper, and also to sell, assign, transfer or set over, any bond and mortgage, or bonds and mortgages, stock or stocks, in any company or association, now belonging or hereafter to belong to me, in the State of New-York, or elsewhere in the United States, for such price or prices, and on such terms and conditions as my said attorneys, or either of them, shall think fit and proper, and for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, to sign, seal, execute and deliver any instrument or instruments in writing—with power to substitute and appoint one or more attorney or attorneys under, or substituted them; in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, the 7th day of August, in the year of our Lord, 1838.

CHARLES WILKES. (Seal.)

The Commodore returned from the expedition and this loan was made subsequently thereto, and, as alleged by the defence and found by the Referee, entirely without his knowledge or consent, and wholly without his authority.

There are in the printed case a number of private letters which passed between the Commodore and his brothers and sisters, all of which are interesting as exhibiting the Commodore's style and giving glimpses of his personal character, but perhaps not proper to be paraded without cause before a curious public.

The case was now argued on appeal from the Referee's report in the Commodore's favor, and decision was reserved.

Doubtful Matrimony—"Something That Looked Like a Broomsticks."

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Clerke and Barnard.

Stephen A. Griffin et al, vs. William Banks and Wright Pomroy.—The plaintiffs, as assignees of Bruce McKinney, claim to recover certain property and moneys held and received by the defendants, as assignees of Mary B. McKinney.

Mary B. McKinney (then Mary Kinney) married Gilbert McCullum in 1825. They lived together as husband and wife until 1830 or 1831, when a deed of separation was executed by them, without any trustee, and they lived separate until his death in June 9, 1851. She resided and carried on business during all that period in the City of New-York. His residence was also in New-York from the time of his marriage until his decease. Mrs. McKinney now alleges that she believed McCullum was drowned in June, 1837, but, it appears, in the month of July, 1842, she caused an advertisement to be inserted in the New-York Sun newspaper for information about him, and stating, "If this comes to his eye, he may hear of something to his interest by calling on John Beatty," &c. The advertisement did come to McCullum's eye, and he called at Beatty's, and afterward consulted a lawyer, to whom he proposed himself to visit the store occupied by his wife, where two ladies were present and a gentleman, who walked toward him, having in his hand "something that looked like a broomstick."

On the 22d of July, 1842, she married Bruce McKinney, without having obtained any divorce from McCullum, who was then alive and in the City of New-York. Bruce, who was a seafaring man, lived with her and assisted her in her business till 20th September, 1844, when they separated in consequence of his intemperance and intercourse with lewd women; and he, being scandalized her name and property, a regular deed of separation was executed by them, and she paid Bruce a consideration of $2,000 for relinquishing any interest he might have in the property.

From the time of her separation from Bruce she continued her business as before, under the name of Mary B. McKinney, down to 21st July, 1854, when, being insolvent, she executed a general assignment to the defendants for the benefit of her creditors.

Immediately after the execution of her assignment, the defendants took possession of all the assigned property, and no difficulty occurred until some weeks afterwards, when she induced some of her creditors to believe she had been imposed on by the defendants, and the other preferred creditors; and thereupon an assignment was made out in New-York, in the name of Bruce McKinney, to the plaintiffs, which was sent over to him at Liverpool and executed there. On its return here, the plaintiffs claimed the property in the defendants' possession, and brought these actions for its recovery.

The first is an action of replevin to recover the goods and chattels in the hands of the defendants; the second to obtain an assignment of the lease of a store, No. 707 Broadway, from the defendants, and that they account for and pay over to the plaintiffs the proceeds of the property sold by them as assignees of Mary B. McKinney, the plaintiffs claiming and the defendants holding this lease as trustees to sell for the benefit of creditors, an order was made in this action appointing a Receiver to sell the lease in the interest, the proceeds to be in the Trust Company, to abide event of this action, and under this order the lease was sold.

It is understood that the plaintiffs abandon the charge of actual fraud in relation to the assignment by Mary B. McKinney.

The question to be decided is whether the second marriage of the wife conferred any authority upon the second husband to make the assignment of her property under which the plaintiffs claim.

Decision reserved.

Wm. Fullerton for appellants.

Wm. M. Evarts for respondents.

Decisions in Probate Courts.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—Sept. 16.

Before Judge Betts.

DELIVERY OF PROPERTY TO THE GOVERNMENT.

The United States vs. The Steamer Ella Warley.—In this case an order was made for the appraisal of the cargo of arms on board the vessel, but the appraisal made under the order having withdrawn the appraisers, the United States District Attorney gave notice of a motion for the appointment of new appraisers, and the delivery of the arms to the Government at the appraised value, which the claimants opposed, claiming that the Court could only dispose of the property by a sale at auction.

Held by the Court.—That by strict law enemy property captured becomes the property of the capturing Power, and may be appropriated by it to its own use. (Wheaton's Int. Law, ch. 2, sec. 24.) But there is an established method of determining through the Courts of Justice whether the capture be or be not lawful prize.

That the captors come before the Court primarily as owners and possessors of the property, and the judgment would be one of absolute transfer of it to them, by condemnation, but with a view to ulterior rights of the captors in the property it is converted into money and distributed in shares.

That the denial of the right to bail captured property, stated in some of the decisions, is only against the claimants. (The Gamemagen, 2 Rob., 178; 1 Wheat. Appx. 502, note; 1 Gall., 154; 2 Gall., 95.)

That there is no question as to the power of a prize Court to bail or sell captured property as perishable. That property appropriated to the use of the United States by the order of an appointment by the naval commander, has been repeatedly condemned, although in such cases an auction sale was impossible.

That the Government has the right to claim a direct appropriation of captured property to public [illegible]

[illegible]

BREACH OF BLOCKADE—EVIDENCE OF CAPTURE.

The United States vs. The Schooner Mary Stewart and her Cargo.—This vessel was captured June 11, 1862, off the coast of South-Carolina, by the bark Gem of the Seas. Before her capture, she was observed by all on board. The Court, on the fact being shown, ordered witnesses from on board the capturing vessel to be examined in preparatory. The vessel was cleared from Nassau for St. Johns, N. B. Her crew list so described her voyage, but the invoice of her cargo described it as from Nassau for Baltimore. Her log-book makes no entry of her being chased or abandoned, but takes up as if the vessel were keeping a regular course of sailing. The proof showed that she was making a direct course toward an inlet of the port of Charleston. No appearance was entered for vessel or cargo.

Held by the Court—That on the evidence there is no room for doubt that the vessel was endeavoring to violate the blockade.

Vessel and cargo therefore condemned.

PROPERTY CAPTURED BY AN ENEMY PRIVATEER.

RESCUE OF CAPTURE.

The United States vs. 1,043 Bags of Rice.—This property was captured on board lighters in the North Santee River, S. C., by the gunboat Albatross and was recaptured on June 29, 1862. The lighters had no one on board of them, and have not been brought in for condemnation. No one appeared for the property. By order of the Court the Assistant Surgeon of the Albatross, who was present at the capture, was examined as a witness.

Held by the Court—That the property being taken about to an enemy port, on board enemy vessels, is prize under the maritime law, independent of any special legislation authorizing it.

That the launches or small boats of the gunboats acted under the full power of the gunboats themselves in making the capture.

Property condemned as lawful prize.

CAPTURE ON LAND BY NAVAL FORCE.

The United States vs. 702 Casks of Rice.—This was a similar case to the preceding, except that the rice, instead of being waterborne, was stored in a warehouse close by the river, which communicated with Charleston Harbor. It was captured at the same time with the property in the preceding case, by the launches of the Albatross and her consort.

Held by the Court—That the practice of the United States Courts is governed by the rules of admiralty law declared in the English reports.

That in England the prize jurisdiction does not depend upon locality, but on the subject matter. It is said by Sir Wm. Scott in the Rebecca (1 Rob. 182) that "A maritime capture effected by naval persons using a force subject to their use, distinguished from an ordinary land force subject to military persons, was a maritime prize."

Decree, therefore, condemning this property as lawful prize.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Clerke.

Stoker vs. Cornwell et al.—Motion denied with $10 costs to plaintiff, to abide event.

Amery vs. Fiske et al.—Motion granted without costs.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice White.

Amery vs. Amery.—Order granted.

Mee vs. Mitchet.—The same.

Heffernan vs. Cleary.—Ordered that the plaintiff have twenty days to serve exceptions to the referee's report.

Kenny vs. McGown and others.—Motion granted.

Before Justice Barnard.

Porter vs. Sylvester and others.—Order of Judge Robertson amended. $10 costs granted to plaintiff to abide event.

Admitted to Practice.

At the opening of General Term of the Supreme Court, Uriah F. Rogers appeared, and was sworn in as a Counsellor of this Court.

FRIDAY, Sept. 19—P. M.

This has been another day of great excitement in Wall-street and on the Stock Exchange. The early accounts in the morning papers were not regarded as confirming the good impression of yesterday from the battle-field. Before the First Board prices gave way from the closing quotations of yesterday ½@¾ ₩ cent.; but there was no strong disposition manifested either on the Street or subsequently at the Board to speculate against the market on the actual news from Wednesday's fight. A fair amount of business was done at the Board at the above decline on the Railway Shares, and at ¼@½ ₩ cent. on the National Stocks. The Railway Bonds were generally steady and most descriptions in fair demand again. Soon after the Board broke up the Street rates were much excited, and large purchases made on news of a favorable nature from the battle-field, said to be in private hands. The market suddenly advanced 1 ₩ cent. Before the Second Board convened, this news was substantially confirmed by the dispatches to the Press of the retreat of the enemy out of Maryland. The effect was a large general business at and after the Second Board, at extreme prices for the New-York [illegible]

The Deposits at Bank to-day are up to $149,745,000. The rise in the line since Monday's average has been most extraordinary, (nearly five millions,) and partly in Gold, though the bulk of the deposits is, of course, in currency. The Specie line is up to $32,257,000. There is but a partial increase in Loans and Discounts. The rates for Money are 4@5 ₩ cent., and the supply easy as well on the Street as at Bank.

The day's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer, was as follows: Receipts, $520,889 45, including for Customs, $196,000; Payments, $1,033,336 10; Balance, $7,905,113 93.

The Pittsburgh City Debt.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

We have received a copy of an "Address to the Holders of Bonds of the City of Pittsburgh issued in Railroad Companies in payment of subscriptions to the Stock of same Companies," emanating from the Finance Committee of the City Councils, and proposing a compromise.

The statistics are interesting, but we have only space for but a few figures.

The City of Pittsburgh issued Bonds to the several railroad companies as follows:

To the Ohio and Pennsylvania	$200,000
To the Pittsburgh and Steubenville, 1st issue	200,000
To the Pittsburgh and Steubenville, 2d issue	200,000
To the Allegheny Valley	100,000
To the Chartiers Valley	100,000
To the Pittsburgh and Connellsville	100,000
Total	$1,000,000

There were due and unpaid Coupons on said Bonds as follows:

Ohio and Pennsylvania	[illegible]
Pittsburgh and Steubenville, 1st issue	[illegible]
Pittsburgh and Steubenville, 2d issue	[illegible]
Allegheny Valley	[illegible]
Chartiers Valley	[illegible]
Pittsburgh and Connellsville	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]
Bank Coupons	[illegible]
Value of Coupons	[illegible]

The average interest upon the Coupons is three years [illegible]

Making the accumulated interest	[illegible]
Add to this the railroad subscriptions	[illegible]
The funded debt of the city	[illegible]
Making the entire city debt	[illegible]
The valuation of the whole county for purposes of taxation is	$27,904,400
Of the city	[illegible]

or [illegible] ₩ cent. of the whole amount, and therefore the proportion of the county debt which the city may be compelled to bear, would amount to $1,276,049 99, which added to the amount of city debt as above, would give an entire liability of $4,[illegible] 99, which divided among 11,207 taxables in the nine wards, is equal to over $400 for every taxable person in the city.

The annual expenses of the city, with its debt, is as follows:

Interest upon the Railroad debt amounts to, per annum	$152,973 00
The interest upon the funded debt	[illegible]
Ordinary expenses of the City organization	120,000 00
The City proportion of County interest	76,505 [illegible]
Assessment for County expenses, 3 mills	[illegible]
Assessment for School and Poor tax, 10 mills	106,513 00
Total	$569,023 00

To meet this, $169,000 would be derived from water-tax, wharfs, &c., leaving $400,023 00 to be raised by direct taxation, requiring a levy of [illegible] ₩ cent., or 48 mills ₩ annum on the assessed value of taxable property in the city, leaving no surplus for last taxes, expenses of collection or sinking fund.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our victory was complete! Such was the word which came from Gen. McClellan at 10½ o'clock yesterday morning, at which time he announced that our cavalry were driving the retreating enemy across the Potomac. On Thursday no fighting except skirmishing took place, the day being occupied in burying the dead and caring for the wounded. The rebels sent in a flag of truce in the morning, asking permission to bury their own dead, which was granted. At daylight, yesterday morning, it was discovered that the rebels had abandoned their position, leaving their dead and wounded behind. It was uncertain whether they were crossing the river or taking up a new position, but a pursuit was immediately ordered, and the truth was soon discovered, and announced by Gen. McClellan as above. It can hardly be possible that the rebel army could escape across the Potomac with all its material, without being severely punished by the pursuing victors, and we shall not be surprised to hear, today, the news of its utter rout. It is understood also, that we have a heavy force on the south side of the Potomac, under command of Gens. Burnside and Hamilton, who will, no doubt, give a good account of themselves.

A different cavalry reconnoissance was made on Thursday, from Gen. Hunter's force, to within three miles of Thoroughfare Gap. A rebel flag was discovered according the rebel Gen. Stuart, yesterday, in the direction of Richmond. Several of the body-guard were captured, and other prisoners captured, including some officers.

A full account of the great battle of Tuesday and Wednesday, with the operations of Thursday, from one of the special correspondents of the Times, will be found in our columns this morning.

The correspondent at Newbern, N. C., informs us that the rebels are concentrating in large numbers at Goldsborough and Kingston, with the evident intention of attacking Newbern. Gen. Foster, however, is not satisfied with waiting to be attacked, but has called for more troops, to enable him to assume the offensive. Lively work is expected in the Department soon.

The town of Franklin, Miss., has been destroyed by our forces—the first carrying rebel prisoners down to Vicksburgh for exchange having been sent into there.

Another surrender to the rebels—and we hope the last—is reported this morning. Munfordsville, after a defence of two or three days against the forces under Bragg, numbering some thirty thousand men, was given up on Wednesday morning, our forces being completely surrounded. The garrison numbered from four to five thousand infantry, and one company of cavalry, with ten pieces of artillery. Our loss during the siege, in killed and wounded, was fifty, while the rebels acknowledge a loss of seven hundred in one day.

The Indians at the Northwest, after doing all the damage of which they are capable against the unprotected white settlers, are now becoming alarmed at the prospect of speedy punishment, and express a desire to make peace. A letter has been received from Little Crow, the Chief of the Sioux, by Col. Sibley, commanding the Nation, in Europe, in which he expresses the desire to know in what way he can make peace for his people. Letters have also been received from the chiefs Wabasha and Tuoty, of a friendly character. The Chippewa Chiefs have been [illegible], and Hole-in-the-Day has promised to dispose his men.

A circular has been issued by Gen. Halleck [illegible] publication in the newspapers of [illegible] to all the army, and [illegible] of Gen. Fremont, the fact that the Evening Post, of this City, recently published a letter giving the position of the National [illegible] Question.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of Cuba Race of the steamship Nevada, from Liverpool via Southampton on the 10th inst., we receive advices from Europe two days later. The death of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Earl of Harrington is announced. It is stated that Spain had offered to send a force to Mexico to cooperate with that of France, and the offer had been declined. France, it is understood, will send 50,000 men. The fate of Montenegro is yet undecided. His wounds are said to be severe. There was a prospect that the difficulties between the Turks and the Montenegrins would be settled, as a telegram states that Montenegro had accepted all the conditions offered by Omar Pasha. The sales of cotton in the Liverpool market for two days had been only 3,000 bales. The market was irregular and dull, and prices had rounded lid. Breadstuffs and Provisions continued dull. There was no change in Colonials.

The Genesee County Agricultural Fair, at the Western Pleasure Grounds, closed yesterday, after a most successful continuance of two days. The exhibition of horses in the afternoon was a fine affair, and attracted thousands of visitors. Altogether, the fair was the best yet held by the society, and one of the best held in the State. It was decidedly a great Fair for war times.

R. Cumming Thomson delivered the third of his excellent lectures on the war, last evening, at the Cooper Institute. Peace was the theme, and the probable of accomplishing its return, and the [illegible]

Perhaps our readers will remember that the third man of a whole gang, who had already two sons in the Union army, was drafted in Hartford county. The Hartford Times says that the sad case has been settled in a manner creditable to all concerned, by a subscription amounting to $326, which sum has secured a substitute for the young man, and he will now be left to support his mother. This is well done for Hartford.

At General Term of the Supreme Court, yesterday, a case brought by Mrs. Henry, a sister of Commodore Wilkes, against the Commodore, was argued, on appeal from a referee's report in favor of the defendant.

There was another day of great excitement in Wall-street yesterday, and the Stock Market, in the afternoon, under the bulletins from Gen. McClellan, closed buoyant and higher than on Thursday by ¼@1¼ ₩ cent. Gold, 11¼; Exchange on London, 139.

A fair business was transacted in Breadstuffs, yesterday, at essentially unchanged prices. Provisions and Sugars were in more demand at buoyant rates. Coffee, Molasses, Hay, Hops, East India Rice, Teas, Nutmegs and Whisky were moderately dealt in. Tallow, Cacutta Linseed, Ingot Copper and Kentucky Tobacco were in good request, as were also Crude Whale and Refined Petroleum Oils. Limited movements were reported in Iron, Lead, Tin, Hemp, Hides, Leathers and Naval Stores. The freight market exhibited less buoyancy.

The Battles in Maryland—A Glorious Victory.

Gen. McClellan's dispatches, which bear date as late as noon of yesterday, are decisive as to the main result of his protracted and desperate engagement with the rebels. He has driven them out of Maryland, back upon the soil of Virginia, after having engaged their whole force and inflicted upon them a complete and bloody defeat. Whatever may have been their force in Maryland at the outset, it is very clear that the progress of the engagement satisfied them that its result must be disastrous,—and that they therefore brought over all the troops they had within reach with the desperate determination to stake everything on the hazard of that battle.

Of the great contests of Tuesday and Wednesday, we publish this morning further clear and connected accounts from our own correspondents—to which we append a graphic report of the engagement of Wednesday, copied from an extra issue of the Tribune. Wednesday's battle was the most important battle of the war thus far. Whether we regard the numbers engaged, the duration of the fight, the close and desperate nature of the contest, the skill displayed, or the numbers of the killed and wounded, this engagement will rank in history as one of the greatest and most sanguinary of modern times. It is clear that Gen. McClellan fought it with great coolness, tenacity, and soldierly skill, and he is fairly entitled to the honors of the day. Although the battle was not decisive in itself, it led to decisive results. We actually gained a little upon them in the matter of space, and held at the close some important positions which they had occupied at the beginning of the day. But, what was still more important, we had inflicted upon them losses which seriously crippled their actual force; and their reinforcements, if they had any, were too far away to be immediately available, while ours were numerous and within reach.

Thursday, therefore, being mainly spent in burying the dead, was also improved by the rebels in salutary reflections on their position—the result of which was to induce a speedy and general retreat. By Friday morning, it appears, that a very large portion of them had recrossed the river, and the remainder proceeded forthwith to follow their example. Gen. McClellan's latest dispatch indicates that our forces were giving them chase; but it also shows that the pursuit was too late, and that the main body of the rebel army had succeeded in escaping across the Potomac.

This will be a disappointment to the public at large; for it seemed impossible that the rebels, if beaten, with a broad river in their rear, should evade pursuit and destruction at the hands of our army. It is quite likely that the request of a truce to bury their dead, on Thursday, was a ruse intended to cover their escape; and we certainly think that Gen. McClellan might very properly have refused their request, and "pushed them to the wall" at once. His own reinforcements may not have been at hand, but he had Porter's corps of 15,000 fresh troops, and every indication that the enemy had been much more seriously crippled than himself. We presume, however, that he had satisfactory reasons for the course he pursued, and until we know them it would be unfair to pronounce judgment upon them.

Our hope now is that in their retreat down the Valley, the rebels encountered the Union force which must surely have been sent up the south line of the Potomac from opposite Washington to intercept them. We take it for granted that Gen. Halleck has taken suitable and adequate precautions against the escape of the rebels back to Richmond, in the event of their defeat.

The impulse of the rebel army in force from Maryland is a most important event—one over which the country may well rejoice, and which settles the gallant and noble soldiers by whom it has been achieved to the lasting gratitude of the American people. We trust the Government will follow it up with vigor and energy. The tide of troops now pouring rapidly forward to Washington will furnish abundant material for the prompt renewal of offensive operations, and obviate the necessity for any long delay in preparatory movements. One thing is very certain,—while due regard must, of course, be paid to prudence,—the Government cannot, within these limits, move too rapidly or too vigorously for the temper of the public mind.

The Twelfth Regiment.—It was melancholy to see the Twelfth Regiment of New-York Militia marching up Broadway yesterday afternoon without their arms, and to reflect that the fine weapons with which they marched down Broadway four months ago had been given up on Monday last into the hands of the rebels, and since then had been used in slaughtering their own comrades. The rebels, by this Harper's Ferry surrender, obtained from ten to twelve thousand first-class muskets, beside a splendid lot of artillery, as well as munitions of war, &c. We are not astonished to learn that the men of this, as of other regiments surrendered by Col. Miles [illegible]

[illegible] proof indignant at the surrender, and that they had bravely and creditably position in which he placed them. But, after all, in surrendering, they simply obeyed orders, which is a soldier's highest duty.

Financial Weakness in Rebeldom.

The conviction we have often expressed of late as to the approaching collapse of the rebellion, are based partly on our National strength, and partly on the weakness of the rebels. Of this weakness, the chief cause is a bankrupt exchequer.

The want of capital in the Southern States has never, perhaps, been so clearly illustrated as by the financial affairs of the rebel Government. In the Richmond Examiner of the 12th inst., we find an elaborate summary of the papers on this subject recently laid before the rebel Congress. From these it appears that notwithstanding all the efforts to raise money by a loan, the whole amount of the funded debt on the 1st August, was only forty-one millions of dollars, a sum scarcely adequate to support the war for a single month. There is, says the Examiner, "an evident indisposition on the part of our people to make investments in this form." Hence, "the funded debt is immeasurably small," and we have "little prospect of raising money by bonds or stock."

Doubtless this reluctance may, in part, be accounted for by a want of confidence in the permanence of the Government. But it is largely due to the fact that the people, however willing to lend, have not the floating capital at command. Their property is fixed. It consists chiefly of slaves, lands, plantations, houses, incapable of conversion into money, and therefore not exchangeable for eight per cent. Confederate stocks.

A more convenient depository for floating capital, if any there are at present available in the South, would, however, be the call certificates, on which so much inflation has been expended. By these, money might temporarily be left in the hands of the Government at six per cent. We find, however, that this form of investment is even less popular than the stocks, thirty-three millions only having been thus deposited. The total amount of the debt under these two heads on the first August was only seventy-four million dollars, while the aggregate expenditure of the war had reached tenearly five times that amount, being over three hundred and forty-seven millions.

The balance, which, according to these figures, is two hundred and seventy-three millions, has been in part provided for by the issue of two hundred millions of Treasury Notes—an amount so much in excess of the wants of a non-mercantile people that the currency was immediately depreciated, and if much more be issued, the results cannot but be equally disastrous with those realized on a memorable occasion, the 29th of November 1779, when ten millions of Continental money were issued, and brought exactly $259,743 in specie.

The only other expedient open to the rebels for raising money was the imposition of a war tax. The amount raised thereby was, however, as might have been predicted, indicrously small. Customs duties yielded one million and a half, and the internal tax, on which such vaunting confidence was reposed, actually produced little more than ten millions. The failure of taxation is the destruction of the only permanent source of revenue, and as any considerable issue of new Treasury Notes will be suicidal, it is not easy to conceive of a more dispiriting financial record than that of the rebels at this moment. After exhausting every device for raising money, and seizing every dollar from the people that could be spared, the insurgent Government are confronted with an unpaid balance amounting at present, with interest, to more than one hundred millions of dollars.

But this is not all. The demands of the army are insatiate, and from the depreciation of the currency prices are doubled, so that money will only go half as far as before. Should the war last till 1st of January, 1863, the estimate is that two hundred and sixty two millions of dollars more will have to be poured into the bankrupt rebel exchequer.

In this pressing exigency what course do the rebels intend to adopt? To carry on the war without money is impossible. They therefore propose, as their only resource, a new issue of paper money. It is easy to foresee the result if this policy be adopted. Southern soldiers, it is said, will fight for rations without pay, but the rations at least must be paid for, and if there be force in financial facts, the utter and irretrievable ruin of the rebellion, if it be now vigorously pressed to the wall, is a question of short time. And as the rebel war was in part caused, so it may be in part crushed by a fatal incapacity and a series of monstrous financial blunders on the part of the trusted leaders of an ignorant and misguided people.

The foreign prophets of woe who have been sedulously inculcating upon the world that the inevitable necessity of compromise or surrender must rapidly overtake the Federal Government which was performing the financial experiment of holding itself up by its own waistband, will do well to contemplate the spectacle which Mr. Memminger's Confederate Budget here offers to their inspection. They must remember that vast as have been our own issues of paper money, they have already been absorbed by the enormous business activity of an empire which maintains its commercial relations with the whole world, and counts a steady supply of gold among the ordinary resources of its production.

If the fatal results which they predict for us are soundly deduced from a fair view of the premises in our own case, what inferences as to the immediate financial future of the rebel States, isolated as these States are, and condemned to a practical surfeit of undeliverable production, will they draw from the report of the Confederate Treasury?

Harper's Ferry Not Recaptured by our Troops.—The authorized telegrams that came to us so thick and fast for two or three days after the surrender of Harper's Ferry, to the effect that the place had been immediately afterward recaptured by our own troops, were all evidently false. The rebels have been in possession of Harper's Ferry since Monday morning last, at 8 o'clock. It has [illegible] [illegible] the rebels when crossing the river, it is extremely doubtful whether it would have been possible for them to have effected their escape into Virginia. We do not expect that they will hold it long if they have really and finally decamped from Maryland; but the loss and disaster which we have already suffered by its surrender are incalculable. The fate of the war, for the present at least, may be said to have hung on the retention of this important post, or its recapture before the rebel army began to cross the river.

The surrender of Harper's Ferry was the most disgraceful thing of this war—more disgraceful even than the rebel surrender of Fort Donelson, for the latter was after a very bloody defence. We remember how much the Fort Donelson affair injured the rebels in Europe—it being universally asserted that it showed a broken spirit and a want of devotion to their cause. The recent surrenders of heavy bodies of our army—including that at Harper's Ferry, that at Munfordsville, (Ky.,) reported this morning, and others which have recently shamed our flag in the West—are not from failing spirit or want of patriotic devotion: but we cannot complain if in Europe they are interpreted in this manner, and malignant articles written to show that the Northern army is dissolving. Every officer in any way responsible for these infamous surrenders, should be punished with the severest penalty allowed by the articles of war.

Have We a Reverse in Kentucky?

Unbroken successes do never attend the cause of any man or any nation, and he is very unwise who expects them. In no school do we learn this fact faster than in war, wherein most unexpectedly and unaccountably the ebb and flow of victory follow each other.

Two or three days ago we had an account by telegraph of a splendid Union success at Munfordsville, Ky. A comparatively small force of raw Indiana volunteers, under command of Col. Wilder, were reported to have repulsed, with heavy loss, two brigades of the rebel Gen. Bragg's army, under Simon Bolivar Buckner. The fight occurred on last Sunday. The attack was begun about daylight, and ended at 1 P. M., the rebels breaking in confusion and flying, leaving the dead and wounded on the field; the former alone numbering, it was said, five hundred, which the rebel General obtained permission under a flag of truce to bury.

The position of Munfordsville, Ky., will doubtless be remembered, as it was often described last Winter, when the rebel army occupied it, previously to falling back upon Bowling Green. Munfordsville is situated on the north bank of Green River, where the Louisville and Nashville Railroad crosses that stream. The south bank of the river, at Munfordsville, is a high and precipitous cliff; and to the north, toward Munfordsville, it presents the face as of a commanding fortress. To the south, it declines gradually, and presents an extended plateau easily swept by guns planted on the eminence. It is a magnificent military position, and was the first defensive point of the rebels that, last Winter, held the Union troops at bay. After our troops obtained possession of the place in the former campaign, this eminence, the south bank, was fortified by earthworks, abattis and ride-pits. These were occupied by Col. Wilder, last Sunday, when he gave so stunning a repulse to Gen. Buckner.

During the attack of Buckner, from the south, on Sunday, a rebel cavalry force, about 1,100 in number, who had evacuated Lebanon the day before, dashed into Munfordsville on the north, planted a battery they had brought with them, and commenced firing into the Union fortifications. But, opportunely, Col. Dunham's Fiftieth Indiana Regiment arrived in their rear, from Louisville, and, by a few well-directed volleys, soon scattered the cavalry force. This left Col. Wilder apparently complete master of the position. His brilliant defence was hailed throughout the country as the turning-point in the rebel invasion of Kentucky, which was to degenerate at once into a rapid and inglorious retreat. In fact, all the letters written from that vicinity, published in the New-York journals, yesterday and day before, represented Buckner to have fallen back Sunday night to Glasgow, Bragg to have commenced his retreat the same night south from that town, and Gen. Rousseau, of Buell's army, who held an advanced position, to have followed Buckner closely in his retreat toward Glasgow.

Thus matters appeared to stand Thursday morning. Thursday night brought us a dispatch from Louisville, Ky., stating that the Journal, of that city, had information of the surrender of Col. Wilder and his entire force to the rebels, at 12 o'clock Tuesday night, "after three days' fighting," but that the story was "not reliable." But yesterday afternoon we had a circumstantial confirmation of the report from Indianapolis, (Ind.,) on the authority of Adjutant Slauson, of one of the Indiana Regiments, who alleges that he escaped from Munfordsville immediately after the surrender, which occurred "Wednesday morning." Adjutant Slauson accounts for the surrender by declaring Col. Wilder to have been nearly surrounded by Gen. Bragg's forces, estimated at 30,000 men.

To us, as now advised, this is one of the most incomprehensible results of the war. Col. Wilder had established that he was no craven, but a cool and skillful fighter. Yet he is represented to have surrendered one of the strongest posts in the West, which he had before gallantly and successfully defended, almost without a blow, and when he must have been well advised of the near approach of Rousseau, of Buell's army, to his aid, with a corps of veterans unsurpassed in the West. We seem to know that Col. Wilder did not surrender after "three days of fighting," for after Sunday noon, the first day of attack, the enemy was whipped. That evening was spent in burying the dead; and at night Col. Wilder reported the enemy had all withdrawn; and so said Monday's letters also. Again, we [illegible] Bragg advance to invest a Union [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Why does the

SUNDAY MERCURY

Occupy its present Prominent Position Among the Leading Newspapers of the Age?

Receive, in plain and simple words, the explanation of the Proprietors.

BECAUSE it gleans from the vast field of information within the range of the Electric Telegraph and the Mails every item of intelligence worth putting into print.

BECAUSE it is independent of all cliques and parties, and has no friend to serve except the people.

BECAUSE its comprehensive War Correspondence furnishes an INSIDE VIEW of the great struggle now in progress, which can be obtained through no other medium.

BECAUSE its Military and Naval Intelligence is often in advance of the latest dispatches given in each and every other paper published on Sunday.

BECAUSE it goes to press at a later hour than any of its competitors, and therefore invariably contains news of the highest importance, received after they have passed through the press, and into the newsboys' and carriers' hands.

BECAUSE it is the best local paper—WITHOUT EXCEPTION—in New-York; giving full reports (inclusive of more choice specialty) of everything of interest that transpires in this and the adjacent cities on Saturday, Saturday night, and up to four o'clock on Sunday morning.

BECAUSE its Shipping News, Markets, and Financial intelligence, are known to be accurate, and contain nothing in it BY ALLODDE, the most reliable business paper published on the 2nd day of the week.

BECAUSE its magnificent Romances, and charming Stories and Novelettes, constitute it the most desirable collection of ORIGINAL IMAGINATIVE LITERATURE procurable in this country.

BECAUSE the WIT, the humor, the pathos of its editorial TABLE-TALK, including the famous Washington letters of ORPHEUS C. KERR, are relished by every man and woman who can appreciate the fashion of genius.

BECAUSE it is fearless and outspoken in its editorial remarks on all subjects of public interest, whether local or national.

BECAUSE it is the uncompromising foe of humbug—whether in politics, literature, or religion.

BECAUSE it faithfully chronicles all important events in the sporting world, sending special reporters to attend athletic games, races, regattas, etc., and presenting all the details fully and clearly.

BECAUSE the particulars of all local military movements are given in its columns.

BECAUSE it is a HOUSEHOLD JOURNAL, which suits the taste of refined and intelligent families.

And, finally, because it combines the best features of the best daily newspapers and literary journals, IN ONE AMPLE SHEET.

These are the distinguishing characteristics which have acquainted for the SUNDAY MERCURY the title of the GREAT SUNDAY NEWSPAPER, and given it a circulation exceeding double the joint issues of all the other Sunday papers now in existence in the City of New-York.

THE MOST INTENSE ANXIETY

is now universally experienced to learn the final result of the

SEVEN DAYS' BATTLE IN MARYLAND,

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE WRITINGS OF WASHINGTON IRVING.

Take notice frequently.

A POPULAR TREATISE ON PHRENOLOGY.

By Dr. R. B. Lyon, of New-York.

One small 12mo., with Illustrations. Price 75 cents.

The very remarkable sale of this little volume is a sufficient guaranty of its popularity and value. Two editions have been sold within so many months, and a third is just ready.

The author's aim has been to produce a book FOR THE PEOPLE, not for the medical profession, but for afflicted individuals and families, who, wishing information upon the subject, have hitherto been at a loss for any work treating in unpretentious language upon Deafness and its attendant evils. This book fills such a vacuum. It is clear and concise.

The New-York Observer says: "There is a large amount of useful information here embodied for the million, to teach them how to guard against deafness, and how to treat it when coming on."

The Boston Commercial Bulletin says: "An excellent and comprehensive little treatise, written in a terse and common-sense style, easily understood."

The work should find its way into the hands of every individual suffering with deafness, or any accompanying affliction. Its value will by all once appreciated.

 Sold by booksellers everywhere, and it will be sent by mail, free, on receipt of price, 75 cents, by

CARLETON, Publisher,
(Late Rudd & Carleton),
No. 412 Broadway, corner Lispenard-st., New-York.

PLEASANT READING

AND AN

Agreeable relief from the depressions and vexatiousness of the times.

THE

OF

WASHINGTON IRVING.

By his nephew,
PIERRE M. IRVING.

Two volumes, ready on Wednesday, Sept. 10.

WITH THREE FINE PORTRAITS.

Price, $1.50 per volume.

The same, uncut, $1 50 per volume; half-calf gilt, or antique, $2 50. A few copies on large paper, $3.

 This is, perhaps, the most interesting and attractive literary work ever published in this country. It abounds with incident and entertainment.

From the New-York Tribune.

Turning aside from the noise of battle and the dreary records of slaughter, it is a real delight to contemplate such a gentleman of serene, peaceful, kindly nature as is presented in this work of Washington Irving.

From the Boston Post.

Not merely is it a bald biography, but a literary phantasm, in which, the central sun, multitudes of other planets revolve in their orbits, and shed lustre in their proper spheres.

From the Alta California.

No more interesting work can be presented to the American people.

From the Boston Transcript.

By universal consent, the literary incident of the trade this season is the publication of the life of Irving.

From N. Y. Tribune.

Not less suggestive than historically delightful.

From the Buffalo Advertiser.

It is a book every way worthy a place beside the other works of the great author.

From the Sacramento Daily Union.

A full-length, flesh-and-blood portrait of the great pioneer of American literature.

 The attention of the trade is specially invited to the new and improved editions of which are now ready, in various sizes and bindings, suited to all tastes, in separate volumes and in complete sets. The great variety of pleasant reading and valuable information presented in these volumes, in the purest language, render them a LIBRARY for the FAMILY, for which no other series could be a substitute.

They are now complete, in a permanent shape, which will not be excelled or superseded. Full lists of the different styles and prices of sets, and of each work, may be had of the publisher.

From the Buffalo Advertiser.

It is seldom that it is accorded to any public man, in any department of human greatness, to accomplish such complete, and perfection of life and labor and fame as was vouchsafed to Irving. . . . He lived to enjoy a large measure of renown, as extensive as the civilized world.

III.

THOMAS HOOD.

"THE PRINCE OF HUMORISTS."

The new and superb ALDINE edition is now complete, in 6 elegant volumes, printed at the Cambridge Press, on superfine tinted paper, with three hundred illustrations on wood from designs by Hoppin and others.

LIKE AND UNLIKE.

A NEW NOVEL, BY A. S. ROE,

Author of "Five Hundred Miles from Home," "True to the Last," etc., etc.

One large handsome 12mo., cloth bound, price $1 25.

"There is no writer of the women day who equals the author in pure simplicity of style, and natural interest and truthfulness of narrative. In thousands of families his books are read and re-read with words and ever increasing delight."

"Like and Unlike" is, so to speak, superior to any other of Mr. Roe's works; it is one of those natural stories which commend themselves to the heart, and while it possesses all the charms of a delightful narrative, it has the further merit of conveying instruction as to conduct in life."

"It is a healthy, stirring book, worth its weight in gold. Every society of a novel with unexceptionable purpose, landscapes will be charmed with 'Like and Unlike.'"

CARLETON, Publisher, New-York.

THE ORPHEUS C. KERR PAPERS.

384 Pages, 12mo. Price $1.

From the Home Journal.

No more humorous phase of the war has yet been drawn up than that in this volume. While the humor of the book is broad, the satire is keen and biting, and is a manner that shows clearly the real sense of ridiculous appreciation of the political tricks of the day. No one can read this volume without heartily laughing over its pages.

From the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

A treat is in store for those who have not read the Orpheus C. Kerr Papers.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

No man in America, with the exception, perhaps, of John Phœnix—has ever written so much to make people laugh as Mr. Newell, author of "The Orpheus C. Kerr Papers."

From the Philadelphia Press.

The "Adventures of the Mackerel Brigade" are among the richest and best sustained productions of American humor.

DR. WARD'S ORIGINAL VIRAL PILLS, the only certain and safe remedy for disease of a private nature. A process of 10 years, devoted to the treatment and cure of Syphilis, Mercurial, and diseases of a delicate nature, enables Dr. W. to make speedy and permanent cures in cases of long standing the only may be. Sufferers of the Sexual and Urinary Organs, Dr. W. invites you to try a remedy which has been tested by all persons interested in a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhea, or Syphilis cured in 1 to 3 days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Symptoms, the last stubborn problem solved, without the use of mercury. Pain and Swelling, or loss of Sexual power, removed without use in a few weeks. Gleet or Gonorrhea of long standing, where all internal remedies have failed, yields to a distinct and entirely novel treatment. Strictures, very quick relief and cure effected by writing a full description of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD & Co., No. 31 Delight-st. the only place.

DR. COBBETT, MEMBER OF THE N. Y. Medical Society, (Medical College,) and Royal College of Surgeons, London, Eng., has removed from No. 14 Pine-st. to his house, a most very commodious house, with a private entrance, at No. 6 Clay-st., where he can be consulted with the most reasonable confidence on all diseases requiring the urinary organs; thirty years in his present specialty, (three of which have been at the Hospitals of this City,) enable him to guarantee a cure in every case undertaken, or make no charge. Structures of the urinary organs, whether from disease or from the use of mercury, treated on a new scientific principle. N. B.—As a proof of Dr. C.'s qualifications, he would call special attention to his diploma, which can be seen in his office.

SULPHUR AND VAPOR BATHS—ESTABLISHED IN 1858.—The only genuine baths in the United States, at No. 1 Carroll-place, Bleecker-st., corner of Laurens, for cure of rheumatism, syphilis, scrofula, diseases, &c. Given daily by Dr. A. L. TIMOLAT & CO.

FOR GENTLEMEN'S USE.—FRENCH INDIA rubber goods—three different articles. Price 50 cents each—$4 per dozen. For descriptive circular call on or address MACKEY & CO., No. 81 Nassau-st., Room No. 12.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great specific, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures in from one to three days, without hindrance from business, without the nauseous drugging so much in vogue, without restriction in the diet of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent prostration of the nervous system; permanently eradicates the poison of assimilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, when the body is heated. This is what he claims for his Red Drop, and what he will prove. He claims for it, in this respect, that it stands alone, as will shortly be seen. In value in this respect has been so well known that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, for some trifling present, who has experienced the whole fault of the fashionable pill, and who will appear, its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find that their lies are not so easily swallowed, they cannot but confess that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Text for 25 cents in stamps, 100 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

PROPOSALS.

NAVY BEEF.

NAVY AGENT'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Sept. 15, 1862.

SEALED PROPOSALS, INDORSED "PROposals for Navy Beef," will be received at this office until MONDAY, the 22d day of September, at 12 o'clock, for supplying 1,000 barrels beef, free of all cost and risk to the United States, at the Navy-yard at Brooklyn.

The Beef must be from well-fattened cattle, and must conform as near as possible in quality to the standard accompanying Navy Beef, and pass the usual inspection of the Navy-yard. The barrels must be according to the Navy standard.

Every offer must be accompanied by a written guarantee, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder or bidders will, if his or their bid be accepted, enter into an obligation in the penalty, with good and sufficient sureties, to furnish the article proposed. This guarantee must be accompanied by the certificates of the United States District Judge, District-Attorney, Collector or Navy Agent, that the guarantors are able to make good their guarantee. No proposal will be considered unless accompanied by such guarantee. Full particulars may be ascertained upon application to the Inspecting Officer at the Navy-yard.

The above Beef is purchased on account of defaulting contractors, and must be furnished immediately.

I. HENDERSON, Navy Agent.

FOR HAVANA VIA NASSAU, N. P. The British and North American Royal

THE GREAT VICTORY.

the soldier, in the language of the commanding General, were just where he wanted them.

He was exceedingly disappointed at the retreat of Gen. Lee to report here what he accomplished at Richmond—much our right when by throwing upon it the bulk of the force of the Confederacy; and nothing but the most [illegible] prudently prevented him from succeeding in his pet scheme. In selecting Gen. Hooker to take the initiative in this important movement, the right man was put in the right place. He soon discovered the intended movement, and he was heavily reinforced during Tuesday night, so that when the enemy attempted down his massed columns upon our right, they were everywhere repulsed with great slaughter.

On Wednesday afternoon as the storm of battle hurried to the left, Gen. McCLELLAN rode along the lines to the right and was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the forces at that point. While Gen. Burnside actually had charge of the field operations, Gen. McCLELLAN visited every part of the field in person, and by his presence encouraged the troops to deeds of valor. Gen. Burnside more particularly paid attention to the right, for he saw Gen. Reno was on the left with his corps (Burnside's) old corps and his services were not particularly needed there.

As a rule, officers and men all did their duty. As there are exceptions to all rules, so there is in this. Two regiments, at least, marched from the field during the hottest of the conflict; and, in the instance, brave officers with the lead in this apparently successful movement. We refrain from publishing these regiments until such time as their conduct is officially noticed.

GEN. RICHARDSON.

Gen. RICHARDSON was everywhere conspicuous during the action, up to the time when he received a grazed wound in the left breast. While being removed from the field he said to the surgeon in attendance, "Tell Gen. McCLELLAN I have been in the front rank, doing the duty of a Colonel. I have done a hard day's work, and have worked all day. I am wounded, and he must detail some one to take my command."

Gen. RICHARDSON was ordered to take Gen. RENO'S command.

THE LOSSES.

Of course, at this time of writing, it is impossible to correctly estimate the losses on either side. In the opinion of those best capable of judging, our loss will not exceed 10,000. Some brigades lost very heavily, while others lost but few men. Gen. RENO'S command and a portion of Gen. FRENCH'S command, suffered the most. They actually lost nearly one-half the men taken into the field.

The loss of the enemy was necessarily much larger than ours. We had heavy guns, located in distant and elevated positions, constantly throwing shells into their columns, massed at the rear of strong fronts.

They massed their forces to take batteries, but were in every instance repulsed with terrible slaughter. COUCH'S First New-York Battery, supported by the One Hundred and Seventh New-York, was charged upon seven times in this way, and each time the attacking force repulsed. The corn-field in which the battery was stationed is covered with dead rebels. Ten horses attached to the battery were killed. Some of the rebel officers who fell into our hands estimate their loss as high as 20,000 men. This may be true, including the men who voluntarily came within our lines; for thousands of prisoners were taken, and some of them came in very willingly. They are tired of the war, and particularly sick fighting as that of yesterday.

THE OPERATIONS OF THURSDAY.

To-day we have had out a strong line of skirmishers, and, up to 3 o'clock, there was constant firing going on in front. Our troops are all lying upon their arms, ready for action. Burial parties are engaged in burying of the dead and removing the wounded.

At 2 o'clock a flag of truce was sent in by Gen. HILL, giving us permission to bury our dead within their lines. As our forces were in possession of about nine-tenths of the battle-field, this proposition was considered, no doubt, a cool one, and was promptly declined.

Subsequently, a flag of truce came in, bearing word that they would cease firing if we would, of which no notice was taken.

The enemy subsequently ceased firing, and under a flag of truce, came within our lines and removed the bodies of some of their officers.

Everything is in readiness for action, but the indications are that the enemy have had pretty much all the fight whipped out of them.

To-day is being devoted to burying the dead and caring for the wounded. To-morrow our army will advance and the rebels will have either to fight or run. Possibly they may not find either expedient to their liking.

LATEST REPORTS FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

HARRISBURG, Friday, Sept. 19.

A gentleman from Chambersburgh this evening, says all the troops stationed there have been sent to Hagerstown and Boonsboro. A company from Philadelphia refused to go over the line. Gen. REYNOLDS said they might go home and be d——d, and disgrace would forever after rest on their shoulders. After the General's reprimand they finally went over the border.

Gov. CURTIN is still at Hagerstown.

A feeling of perfect security is now felt here in official circles.

Quite a number of wounded have arrived here and at points on the Cumberland Valley road.

The news of McCLELLAN'S great victory achieved to-day was received with great rejoicing.

The troops here are urging to be sent forward, that they may yet rout the enemy, and assist in the great work of crushing the rebellion.

The bodies of Capt. Geo. A. BROOKS, Forty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and Col. SAMUEL CROUSDALE and Capt. W. H. ANDREWS, both of the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania, were brought here to-day.

Travel to Chambersburgh and Hagerstown was resumed to-day, and the telegraph is now open to Boonsboro.

REMAINS OF COL. MILES.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 18.

The body of Col. MILES arrived here to-day, and was escorted by cavalry, to the residence of ANTHONY JAMARTY, Esq., friend of the family. The bodies of Col. CHILDS, Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry, Col. COLEMAN, Eleventh Ohio, Col. PAXAN, Fifty-Seventh New-York, Col. GOODRICH, Sixtieth New-York, and Capt. FESSENDEN, Tenth Maine, also arrived to-day. Col. EMAKS, of the Tenth Maine, is in this City wounded.

BALTIMORE, Friday, Sept. 19.

The remains of the lamented Col. MILES were conveyed this morning to "Sweet Air," near Baltimore, the residence of his wife, where the funeral services will take place.

THE FUNERAL OF GEN. RENO.

BOSTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

The funeral exercises over the remains of Maj.-Gen. RENO took place to-day in Trinity Church, Bishop EASTBURN officiating. Gov. ANDREW and other State officials were present. The members of Gen. RENO'S Staff were the pall-bearers.

The body will be removed to Virginia for interment.

THE REMAINS OF GEN. MANSFIELD.

BALTIMORE, Friday, Sept. 19.

The body of Gen. MANSFIELD arrived here to-day, and is being embalmed. The Eighty-seventh Ohio, three months men, from Harper's Ferry, passed through to-night for Philadelphia, on the way home.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

INFORMATION TO THE ENEMY.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19.
HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY.

CIRCULAR: Maj.-Gen. FOSTER, commanding the Department of North-Carolina, has called attention to an article in the New-York Evening Post, of September 4, in which is published the numbers and positions of his troops. He remarks that the New-York papers always reach the enemy in a few days after publication, and that such information from our friends is more injurious than that gained by the rebel spies.

The Newspaper Press is earnestly requested to make no publication in regard to the numbers and movements of our troops.

No information could be more desirable to the enemy than this. Such publications have done immense injury to our cause.

H. W. HALLECK, General-in-Chief.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

THE CARE OF THE WOUNDED.

Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND, accompanied by a corps of Assistants, left here this morning for the battle-field. Dr. JOS. R. SMITH is Acting Surgeon-General during his absence. It is said that Dr. LIBERMANN, Medical Director of the Army of the Potomac, has been ordered to send five thousand of the wounded to this city, one thousand to Baltimore and one thousand to Philadelphia. Medical Inspector KITES has been ordered to Harrisburgh to make arrangements for the reception of the wounded who may be sent there.

Medical-Inspector KITES telegraphs here that he has made arrangements for the accommodation of about eight hundred wounded at Harrisburgh and Reading. A number are also being sent to Hagerstown, which is only nine miles distant from the battle-field.

REMOVAL.

The office of the Medical Director has been removed to near the corner of Fifteen and a Half-street and Vermont-avenue.

WHAT FOREIGN OFFICERS SAY OF OUR ARMY AND OF THE CAMPAIGN IN MARYLAND.

There are now in Washington several foreign officers who are supposed to have been sent by European Governments for the purpose of making observations on the American war, and on the manner in which it is conducted. They are said to be men of fine education, and perfectly acquainted with their profession. One of them, whom I met the other evening at WILLARD'S Hotel, has seen war in Africa, in the Crimea and in Italy, and visited most of the battle-fields which hold a conspicuous place in modern history.

I understand that these gentlemen have the highest opinion for Gen. McCLELLAN'S character and talents, and look upon the American soldier as being the equal of the best European soldiers in power of endurance, courage and disciplined valor. They think, however, that the human economy of the war is susceptible of great improvements. They are unanimous in blaming the reckless and unnecessary exposure of our men to the enemy's fire, as if bravery, without generalship or life, was the highest virtue among soldiers; and add that marches and countermarches more than enough to fatigue and harass the troops, are unnecessary. The art of war, they say, consists in gaining the greatest advantages with the least possible loss; and most part of the time great slaughter proves nothing except the heroism of the soldiers.

In regard to the present campaign in Maryland, they look upon it as a mistake on the part of the Confederates, who, they say, have crossed the Potomac with an insufficient supply of artillery, wagons and ambulances. Gen. McCLELLAN'S pursuit of the enemy, they consider as a well-conceived and vigorously executed plan. They prophesied his complete success on two conditions: first, that he will repel any attack that can be made on his rear; second, that he will either retake Harper's Ferry and secure the Maryland Heights, which they call the Thermopylæ of the present campaign, or force the rebels to withdraw by falling upon their rear and cutting off their communications with Richmond. These officers look upon the mountainous regions of Maryland as one of the strongest natural fortifications in the world, and say that 30,000 men could defend them against an army three times stronger.

A STATEMENT FROM GEN. CASSIUS M. CLAY IN REGARD TO GOV. MORGAN AND GEN. FREMONT.

Gen. CASSIUS M. CLAY publishes a card to-day denying that he has ever said a word to the President about Gov. MORGAN, or in favor of making him the commander of the Northwestern Grand Division of troops. He (CLAY) has never proposed any way of carrying on the war than by the constituted authorities; nor has he desired the overthrow of President LINCOLN, or the establishment of the Dictatorship of Gen. FREMONT, or any other man. He (CLAY) calls upon the country to trust the President, as he himself does. He pronounces all the assertions concerning him calumnious.

NEW HOSPITAL.

A large hospital, capable of accommodating 2,500 patients, is being erected on the plain east of the Capitol. The buildings are to be constructed with every regard to the requirements of sanitary science.

Another hospital, capable of accommodating six hundred patients, has been fitted up on Seventh-street, near the Boundary.

CURRENCY STAMPS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue invariably returns orders and money sent to him for currency stamps, such stamps not being issued from his office. They are procured from the United States Treasurer, but no one need to send to him at present, as he is now supplying the Government only.

The total amount of postage currency issued by the Treasury Department, down to date, is $460,807. The issues of to-day were: of five cent notes, $2,000; of ten cent notes, $2,000; of twenty-five cent notes, $8,000; of fifty cent notes, $16,000. Of one and two dollar Treasury notes, the total issue is $522,000—the issues of to-day being $40,000 of one dollar notes, and $48,000 of twos.

A BRAVE OFFICER JUSTIFIED.

Lieut. A. M. RANDOL, First United States Artillery, commanding Battery E, attached to the brigade of Gen. GEORGE G. MEADE, having lost his guns in the engagement of June 30, requested a Court of Inquiry, which has reported that the battery was defended to the last with "coolness, gallantry and skill," and that the loss of the guns is due solely to the want of proper and timely infantry support.

NAVAL ORDERS.

Master EDWARD HEGNER has been promoted to Acting Volunteer Lieutenant for gallant conduct during the attack on Washington, N. C., and been ordered to the command of the steamer Victoria.

GEORGE W. MARVIN and JAMES FENNETTA have been appointed Acting Assistant Surgeons.

The following officers have been ordered to the steam sloop Mohican: Capt. J. B. Marchand, Lieut. R. K. Buer, Acting Master R. B. Ely, Boatswain G. C. Abbott, Gunner Wm. Arnold.

PAROLED PRISONERS.

Adjutant-General THOMAS left Washington to-day for Annapolis, on business connected with the large number of paroled prisoners now at that station. There is no doubt he will promptly take initiative measures for their exchange, as he is the Commissioner of the United States for that purpose, and has heretofore satisfactorily performed similar service.

GEN. WEBER.

Brig.-Gen. MAX WEBER has been ordered to report for duty to Maj.-Gen. DIX, at Fortress Monroe; and Brig.-Gen. GILMORE, now on duty with the Army of Kentucky, to Gen. WEBER, at Cincinnati.

COL. WOOD.

Col. A. M. WOOD, of the Brooklyn Fourteenth, today received his commission as Collector of Inland Revenue for the Second District of New-York. When the President made Cols. CORCORAN and WILCOX Brigadier-Generals, a similar appointment was tendered to Col. WOOD. It was declined on account of his impaired health, and the Collectorship is awarded by the President as an equivalent. He has never fully recovered from the wounds received at Bull Run, and his physicians some time ago pronounced it unwise for him to take the field.

CAPTURE OF A SPY.

A man giving his name as J. P. WALTER, was arrested on the other side of the Potomac recently as a spy. On yesterday he stole a horse from a farmer in the neighborhood of Dranesville, and rode through our lines. While returning to-day he was captured and turned over to the military authorities.

MARYLAND CONTRABANDS.

Since the rebel invasion of Maryland, large numbers of contrabands have escaped from the invaded region to this city. They will be placed in the same category with slaves escaping from States in active rebellion against the Government—that is, afforded protection by the military authorities. The same protection should be afforded to those escaping from the hotbeds of secession in the lower counties of Maryland.

CONVALESCENT CAMP.

The Provost-Marshal and his assistants have been kept very busy to-day transferring deserters and stragglers to the convalescent camp at Alexandria. Col. J. S. BURNAP, of the Eighty-fifth New-York Regiment, will have command of the camp, under direction of the Military Governor of Alexandria.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

Indian Commissioner DALE has recently written to Gov. RAMSEY, of Minnesota, that he has not very strong hopes of reestablishing friendly relations with the Chippewa Indians. At a recent interview with Chief HOLE-IN-THE-DAY, LAMBERT came with four hundred armed warriors at his back, and maintaining throughout a tone of great hauteur and independence. The iniquitous plundering operations of the Government agents are without doubt a main element of the prevailing dissatisfaction and hostility.

Adjt.-Gen. THOMAS left to-day for Annapolis, to arrange for the transfer of our troops paroled by the enemy to the West, to fight the Indians. As cavalry alone are of any service against the Indians, and as scarcely any of our paroled troops belong to that arm of the service, it is difficult to perceive the utility of this arrangement. Minnesota has abundant infantry militia to guard her settlements, if infantry could do it.

A MILITARY RAILROAD.

Mayor WALLACE and a deputation of municipal authorities, here called on the President to-day to urge the joint action of the National and City Governments in constructing a military railroad from Washington to Point of Rocks, and also one from Washington East to Chesapeake Bay. The project met with favor from the President and Secretary of War.

APPOINTMENT.

EDWARD H. HALL, of Illinois, many years compiler and publisher of the State Gazetteer and Directory in Chicago, has been appointed to a clerkship in the Internal Revenue Department.

GEN. GARFIELD.

Gen. GARFIELD, who drove HUMPHREY MARSHALL out of Sandy Valley, Kentucky, and has since been serving in BUELL'S army, reported for duty to-day at the War Department. He has not fully recovered from his dangerous illness, but is ready again to take the field.

ARRIVALS.

Ex-Gov. A. H. REYNOLDS is here. GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN arrived here to-day. Hon. Mr. REA, of Minnesota, is in town.

WOUNDED.

Lieut. HENRY BOWEN, of the Tenth New-York, was slightly wounded in the fight on Lookout on Wednesday.

IMPORTANT FROM KENTUCKY.

Surrender of Munfordsville to the Rebels.

Five Thousand Troops and Ten Pieces of Artillery Gone.

Bragg's Forces Estimated at 80,000 Men.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ia., Friday, Sept. 19.

Adjutant STATSON, of the Seventeenth Indiana Regiment, who escaped from Munfordsville immediately after the surrender of that place to the rebels, has reached this city.

He reports that the garrison there, numbering from 4,000 to 5,000 men, comprising the Seventeenth, the Fiftieth, the Sixtieth, the Sixty-seventh, the Sixty-eighth and the Sixty-ninth Indiana Regiments, and one company of cavalry and ten pieces of artillery, have surrendered.

The surrender was made on Wednesday morning, our forces being completely surrounded by Gen. BRAGG'S forces, estimated at 80,000 men.

Our loss in killed and wounded was fifty.

The rebels acknowledge a loss of 700 on Sunday.

LOUISVILLE, Friday, Sept. 19.

At the surrender of Munfordsville on Wednesday morning, the rebels took about 4,000 prisoners, whom they are reported subsequently to have paroled, comprising the Sixtieth, Sixty-seventh and Eighty-ninth Indiana, four hundred men of the Fiftieth Indiana, two companies of each of the Seventeenth and Seventy-fourth Indiana, one company of the Louisville Provost Guard, seventy recruits for the Thirty-third Kentucky, the Fourth Ohio Battery of six guns with four other guns in position.

The loss at Munfordsville previously stated was in the fight. There was two or three hours' skirmishing on Tuesday between the sharpshooters of both parties. The rebels did not attack us in force in the Sunday's fight. Gen. CHALMERS made an attack on our forces with eleven regiments on Tuesday night. BUCKNER'S Division was added to this force. The firing on Tuesday was a rebel feint, to enable them to secure the north bank of the river. In that we lost two killed and four or five wounded.

LOUISVILLE, Friday, Sept. 19—11 P. M.

There are very many reports in circulation from down the road, the transmission whereof by telegraph is prohibited by the military authorities, who, however, entertain the hope and belief that the preparations now actively consummating will not only insure the safety of Louisville, but speedily clear Kentucky of her rebel invaders.

A BRILLIANT RECONNOISSANCE.

A Rapid Cavalry Dash to Within Three Miles of Thoroughfare Gap—Capture of a Part of Gen. Ewell's Body-Guard.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

A cavalry reconnoissance, made from Gen. HEINTZELMAN'S headquarters yesterday morning, accomplished one of the most rapid and brilliant achievements of the campaign. They went within three miles of Thoroughfare Gap, performing a distance of eighty miles in less than twenty hours.

Near Thoroughfare Gap they discovered a rebel force acting as a body-guard to Gen. EWELL, who was in an ambulance, very badly wounded, and being escorted toward Richmond. Three of this body-guard were captured, together with about thirty more prisoners, several of whom were officers, and some wagons.

This report was sent in by Gen. BIRNEY.

THE GUERRILLAS IN MISSOURI.

Bands Congregating on the Southwestern Border—Movements Against Them.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, Sept. 18.

Gen. SCHOFIELD has departed for Springfield to take command in person of the forces in the Southwest.

Guerrilla bands, under HINDMAN, PIKE, COFFEY and RAINS, have been congregating on the Southwest border, for the purpose of again invading the State. Their movements have been closely watched, and every preparation made to give them a fitting reception. Gen. SCHOFIELD enters the campaign with a full knowledge of the country, character and resources of the enemy, and speedy and conclusive achievements may be relied on.

THE WAR ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Destruction of the Town of Prentice, Miss.

CAIRO, Friday, Sept. 19.

The fleet carrying the rebel prisoners to Vicksburgh was fired into at Prentice, opposite Napoleon, Ark. Several balls passed through the Istas, killing a number of rebels. None of our men were hurt. The gunboat landed, and gave the inhabitants fifteen minutes to remove the women and children, at the end of which time the town was burned.

Great Fire in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Friday, Sept. 19.

At 1 o'clock this morning, a fire broke out in the brick building, corner of Water and Norton's street, used as a grain drying house.

The fire spread rapidly to the Evans and Sterling Elevators, which, with their contents, were destroyed.

The fire then crossed Norton-street, communicating to BELL'S foundry, KLEIN & DOXSEE'S pump and block factory, and a number of tenement houses on Evans, Fly and Louisaleux streets, all of which were burned.

Crossing the Evans Ship Canal, the fire spread to EVANS' Office and warehouses.

In the warehouses were stored between 50,000 and 60,000 barrels of whisky and highwines, owned by Mr. WILLIAMS, the larger portion of which were saved.

DAVID BELL'S loss is estimated at $50,000 to $70,000.

The loss of EVANS is not known, but it is mostly covered by insurance.

It is impossible at present to give anything approximating to the amount of the total loss or insurance.

The loss will probably reach half a million of dollars.

Some thirty or forty buildings are destroyed.

The elevators contained 12,372 bushels of wheat, 40,000 bushels of corn, and 23,000 bushels of oats.

BUFFALO, Friday, Sept. 19.

The following are the principal sufferers by the fire this morning: The Evans Elevator, owned by CHAS. W. EVANS, valued at $40,000, insured for $20,000; The Sterling Elevator, owned by D. S. ADDISS, valued at $30,000, insured for $12,500; Geo. C. WILSON, WM. WILLIAMS and GEO. TRUSCOTT, 2,251 barrels highwines, stored in the warehouse of JAS. C. EVANS, loss heavy, pretty well covered by insurance; the warehouse of JAS. C. EVANS, loss $7,000, insured $4,500; the foundry of DAVID BELL, building and machinery, $20,000, no insurance; the Cleveland block, owned by C. M. REED, of Erie, Penn., and about fifteen or twenty wooden tenement buildings, loss not ascertained.

The buildings were old, and of but little value. A large number of poor families have been rendered homeless by the conflagration. The total loss is estimated at $300,000; the insurance, as far as ascertained, is $120,000. The names of the companies are not ascertained, as yet.

The American Pomological Society.

BOSTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

This national institution has just closed its ninth session, having been the most successful ever held by the society. Fourteen States were represented by 186 delegates. Large collections of fruit were presented from most of the States. Hon. MARSHAL P. WILDER, of Massachusetts, was elected President, with a Vice President from each State.

Death of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Earl of Harrington.

Thirty Thousand French Troops Going to America.

The Fate of Garibaldi Yet Undecided.

A DECLINE IN COTTON.

CAPE RACE, Friday, Sept. 19.

The steamship Borussia, from Hamburg, via Southampton the 10th inst., was boarded by the News yacht at noon to-day, on route to New-York, and the annexed summary of her news obtained.

The steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Quebec, arrived at Liverpool on the 10th.

The steamship Minnesota, from New-York, arrived at Southampton on the 10th.

From the uncertainty prevailing in England about the safety of the Great Eastern, (she is delayed in New-York.—EDS.,) the Underwriters' premium had gone up to twenty guineas at Liverpool.

The Prince of Wales and Prince ALFRED had arrived at Brussels.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Earl of Harrington are dead.

The Anglo Saxon's news had not the slightest effect on Consols, which were quoted 93¾@93¾ for money, and 93¾@93¾ for the October account.

Loans were offered on the Stock Exchange at 1½ per cent.

The Paris Pays says that Spain has offered to send a contingent to Mexico, but that France would not accept the offer. France sends 20,000 men.

La France says the unity of Italy is impossible, but it should be realized it would introduce a serious perturbation into European order, and all the national power of France would be compelled to demand compensation from Italy, and a change in her established territorial limits in order to guarantee herself against several powerful neighbors.

The Russian were quoted 69¾. 65c.

The Montenegrins refuse to accept the conditions offered by the Turks, and, taking advantage of the present armistice, have instructed their representative at Constantinople to demand more favorable terms. During the conference, the Montenegrins have been fortifying Cettigne, and transporting all their valuables to Cetarra.

OMAR PASHA had recommenced hostilities. The Turks had set fire to the Servian portion of Belgrade, and the Prefect's palace was in flames. The Turks also fired on the inhabitants.

A later telegram says that MONTENEGRO has accepted all the conditions offered by OMAR PACHA.

On account of the state of siege at Naples, the Garibaldian anniversary of his entry into Naples will not be celebrated.

The press of Lombardy is unanimous in favor of an amnesty being granted to GARIBALDI and his followers.

GARIBALDI had requested to be allowed to embark on an English vessel.

Neither documents nor money were found at Aspromonte, where he was taken prisoner.

Nothing had been decided respecting GARIBALDI. His wounds were very serious.

There was little business doing in Australia. A royal commission had been appointed to report on the prospects of gold mining.

the center, in full view of the surrounding Gen. Lee, who had taken up a position there.

It was understood the intention of Gen. Lee to so, [illegible] on Richmond, [illegible] greatly in his rear right wing by throwing upon it the bulk of the force at his disposal; and nothing but the utmost management, generalship displayed by Gen. Hooker in his retreat to the terrible movement, the [illegible] was put to the right place. He came [illegible] and he was literally [illegible] Tuesday night, so that when the enemy attacked during the morning [illegible] right, they were completely repulsed with great slaughter.

On Wednesday afternoon, as the storm of battle raged in the left, Gen. McCLELLAN came along the lines of the right and was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the forces at that point. While Gen. [illegible] assisted and cheered the troops, Gen. McCLELLAN visited every part of the field to get [illegible] and by his presence encouraged the troops to [illegible] Gen. Burnside more particularly paid attention to the right, for he saw Gen. Burnside [illegible] with his wing (Sumner's) old corps and his services were not particularly needed there.

As a whole, officers and men all did their duty. As [illegible] in 13 hours, as there is to tell. The [illegible], it is true, marched from the field during the battle of the morning; and, in one instance, at least, the officers with the head in this ignominious movement. We refrain from [illegible] their reputable until such time as their [illegible] is [illegible].

GEN. RICHARDSON.

Gen. RICHARDSON was everywhere conspicuous during the action, up to the time when he received a gunshot wound in the left breast. While being removed from the field he said to the surgeon in attendance, "Tell Gen. McCLELLAN I have been in the front rank, doing my duty as a Colonel. I have done a hard day's work, and have worked all day. I am [illegible] and he must detail some one to take my [illegible]."

Gen. HALLECK was ordered to take Gen. RICHARDSON's [illegible].

THE SCENE.

Of course, at this time of writing, it is impossible to accurately estimate the losses on either side. In the opinion of those best capable of judging, our loss will not exceed 10,000. Some brigades took very heavily, while others lost but few men. Gen. RICHARDSON's, said a portion of Gen. French's command, suffered the most. They actually lost nearly one-half the men taken into the field.

The loss of the enemy was necessarily much larger. We had heavy guns, located in distant, but distinct positions, constantly throwing shells into their columns, massed at the rear of strong fronts. They cannot their forces to take batteries, but were in every instance repulsed with terrible slaughter. Cowin's First New-York Battery, say reported by the One Hundred and Seventh New-York, was charged upon seven times in this way, and each time the attacking force repulsed. The corn-field in which the battery was stationed is covered with dead rebels. The horses attached to the battery were killed. Scores of the rebel officers who fell into our hands estimate their loss as high as 20,000 men. This may be true, including the men who voluntarily came within our lines by thousands; for prisoners were taken, and some of them came in very willingly. They are tired of the war, and particularly each fighting on that of yesterday.

THE OPERATIONS OF THURSDAY.

To-day we have had but a strong line of skirmishers, and, up to 2 o'clock, there was constant firing going on in front. Our troops are all lying upon their arms, ready for action. Burial parties are engaged in burying of the dead and removing the wounded.

At 2 o'clock a flag of truce was sent in by Gen. [illegible], asking permission to bury our dead within their lines. Some forces were in possession of about [illegible] of the battle-field, this proposition was [illegible], as a trick, and was promptly [illegible].

Subsequently, a flag of truce came in, bearing word that they would cease firing if we would, of which no notice was taken.

The enemy subsequently ceased firing, and under a flag of truce, came within our lines and removed their [illegible] of their officers.

Everything is in readiness for action, but the indications are that the enemy have had pretty much all the fight whipped out of them.

To-day is being devoted to burying the dead and caring for the wounded. To-morrow our army will advance and the rebels will have either to fight or run. Possibly they may not find other expedients to their liking.

LATEST REPORTS FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

HARRISBURG, Friday, Sept. 19.

A gentleman from Chambersburgh this evening, says all the troops stationed there have been sent to Hagerstown and Boonsboro. A company from Philadelphia refused to go over the line. Gen. RANSOM said they might go home and be drummed out, and disgrace would forever after rest on their regiment. After the Governor's regiment they finally went over the border.

Gen. CURTIN is still at Hagerstown.

A feeling of perfect security is now felt here in official circles.

Quite a number of wounded have arrived here and at points on the Cumberland Valley road.

The news of McCLELLAN's great victory achieved to-day was received with great rejoicing.

The troops here are urging to be sent forward, that they may yet rout the enemy, and assist in the great work of crushing the rebellion.

The bodies of Capt. Geo. A. BROOKS, Forty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and Col. SAMUEL CROSSDALE and Capt. W. H. ARMAYS, both of the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania, were brought here to-day.

Travel to Chambersburgh and Hagerstown was resumed to-day, and the telegraph is now open to Boonsboro.

REMAINS OF COL. MILES.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 18.

The body of Col. MILES arrived here to-day, and was escorted by cavalry, to the residence of ASHBURY JARRETT, Esq., friend of the family. The bodies of Col. CHILDS, Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry, Col. COLEMAN, Eleventh Ohio, Col. PAZAN, Fifty-Seventh New-York, Col. GOESSLER, Sixtieth New-York, and Capt. FORESTER, Tenth Maine, also arrived to-day. Col. BEALE, of the Tenth Maine, is in this City wounded.

BALTIMORE, Friday, Sept. 19.

The remains of the lamented Col. MILES were conveyed this morning to "Sweet Air," near Baltimore, the residence of his wife, where the funeral services will take place.

THE FUNERAL OF GEN. RENO.

BOSTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

The funeral exercises over the remains of Maj. Gen. RENO took place to-day in Trinity Church, Bishop EASTBURN officiating. Gov. ANDREW and other State officials were present. The members of Gen. RENO's Staff were the pall-bearers.

The body will be removed to Virginia for interment.

THE REMAINS OF GEN. MANSFIELD.

BALTIMORE, Friday, Sept. 19.

The body of Gen. MANSFIELD arrived here to-day, and is being embalmed. The Eighty-seventh Ohio, three months men, from Harper's Ferry, passed through to-night for Philadelphia, on the way home.

POSTSCRIPT.

SATURDAY, 4 O'CLOCK A. M.

THE RETREAT OF THE REBELS.

Burnside in Pursuit by Way of Harper's Ferry.

PHILADELPHIA, Friday, Sept. 19—Midnight.

Forney's Press has just received highly interesting intelligence from Gen. McCLELLAN's army up to noon to-day, which the editor kindly furnishes to the Associated Press. The substance of its special correspondence is briefly as follows:

Early last night the enemy commenced crossing the Shepherdstown Bridge and two fords above and below it. During the night McCLELLAN advanced a battery and shelled them from the surrounding hills. The dead and wounded found this morning evidence the ability of our signal officers in directing the fire of guns.

On discovering the movement of the enemy, early this morning Gen. PLEASANTON was dispatched in hot pursuit with two batteries and two regiments of infantry through a gap of high hills and he succeeded in cutting off a large amount of their ammunition, supplies, &c., beside a small portion of Gen. MARTIN GARTH's South Carolina Brigade. Gen. PLEASANTON shelled the enemy with effect as they passed through his ranks.

The last seen of the enemy they were flying in the direction of Winchester, and it is supposed they would retreat precipitately on to Richmond.

Our entire army had crossed Antietam Creek this morning, and was massed between Antietam Creek and the Potomac, opposite Shepherdstown, and there was every evidence that McCLELLAN would cross the river.

The loss of general and field officers in our army is so large as to be unaccountable.

Rebel deserters represent the loss of the enemy's officers equally severe. It was understood that Gen. Burnside has crossed into Virginia via Harper's Ferry and moving on the enemy.

Deserters report that the recent movement of the rebels in escaping into Virginia was entirely conducted by Stonewall JACKSON, the other chief officers LEE, LONGSTREET, &c., being either wounded or too much fatigued to be efficient.

They also state that it was believed in the rebel army that a force of National troops had passed through Thoroughfare Gap and intercepted their retreat, and (by) reported this movement was un-great dread.

DETAILS

VERY LATEST FROM THE BATTLE-FIELD.

HARRISBURG, Saturday, Sept. 20—A. M.

A dispatch received at official quarters up to this hour (midnight), from a person who visited the battle-field, reports the rebel loss too to our own.

Their dead were left unburied, and the wounded found shelter in barns and woods along the whole route to Williamsport, where the enemy has no doubt crossed with the remnant of the army. A great amount of ammunition was captured, together with a large number of prisoners, who have been sent to Hagerstown.

The company that refused to go over the line was from Lancaster and not from Philadelphia, as previously stated.

INFORMATION TO THE ENEMY.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19.
HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY.

ORDERS: Maj.-Gen. FOSTER, commanding the Department of North-Carolina, has called attention to an article in the New-York Evening Post, of Sept. 6, in which is published the numbers and positions of his troops. He remarks that the New-York papers always reach the enemy in a few days after publication, and that such information from our friends is more injurious than that gained by the rebel spies.

The Newspaper Press is earnestly requested to make no publication in regard to the numbers and movements of our troops.

No information could be more desirable to the enemy than this. Such publications have done immense injury to our cause.

H. W. HALLECK, General-in-Chief.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

THE CARE OF THE WOUNDED.

Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND, accompanied by a corps of Assistants, left here this morning for the battle-field. Dr. Jos. R. SMITH is Acting Surgeon-General during his absence. It is said that Dr. LETTERMAN, Medical Director of the Army of the Potomac, has been ordered to send five thousand of the wounded to this city, one thousand to Baltimore and one thousand to Philadelphia. Medical Inspector KYLER has been ordered to Harrisburgh to make arrangements for the reception of the wounded who may be sent there.

Medical-Inspector KYLER telegraphs here that he has made arrangements for the accommodation of about eight hundred wounded at Harrisburgh and Reading. A number are also being sent to Hagerstown, which is only nine miles distant from the battle-field.

REMOVAL.

The office of the Medical Director has been removed to near the corner of Fifteen and a Half-street and Vermont-avenue.

WHAT FOREIGN OFFICERS SAY OF OUR ARMY AND OF THE CAMPAIGN IN MARYLAND.

There are now in Washington several foreign officers who are supposed to have been sent by European Governments for the purpose of making observations on the American war, and on the manner in which it is conducted. They are said to be men of fine education, and perfectly acquainted with their profession. One of them, whom I met the other evening at WILLARD's Hotel, has seen war in Africa, in the Crimea and in Italy, and visited most of the battle-fields which hold a conspicuous place in modern history.

I understand that these gentlemen have the highest esteem for Gen. McCLELLAN's character and talents, and look upon the American soldier as being the equal of the best European soldiers in power of endurance, patience and steadfast valor. They think, however, that the human economy of the war is susceptible of great improvements. They are unanimous in blaming the reckless and unnecessary exposure of our men to the enemy's fire, as if bravery alone, regardless of life, was the capital virtue among officers and soldiers; and add that marches and countermarches have won more battles than guns and bayonets. The art of war, they say, consists in gaining the greatest advantages with the least possible loss; and most part of the time great slaughter proves nothing except the heroism of the soldiers.

In regard to the present campaign in Maryland, they look upon it as a mistake on the part of the Confederates, who, they say, have crossed the Potomac with an insufficient supply of artillery, wagons and ambulances. Gen. McCLELLAN's pursuit of the enemy, they consider as a well-conceived and vigorously executed plan. They prophesied his complete success on two conditions: first, that he will repel any attack that can be made on his rear; second, that he will either retake Harper's Ferry and secure the Maryland Heights, which they call the Thermopylæ of the present campaign, or force the rebels to withdraw by falling upon their rear and cutting off their communications with Richmond. These officers look upon the mountainous regions of Maryland as one of the strongest natural fortifications in the world, and say that 30,000 men could defend them against an army three times stronger.

A STATEMENT FROM GEN. CASSIUS M. CLAY IN REGARD TO GOV. MORGAN AND GEN. FREMONT.

Gen. CASSIUS M. CLAY publishes a card to-day denying that he has ever said a word to the President about Gov. MORGAN, or in favor of making him the commander of the Northwestern Grand Division of troops. He (CLAY) has never proposed any way of carrying on the war than by the constituted authorities; nor has he desired the overthrow of President LINCOLN, or the establishment of the Dictatorship of Gen. FREMONT, or any other man. He (CLAY) calls upon the country to trust the President, as he himself does. He pronounces all the assertions concerning him calumnious.

CURRENCY STAMPS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue invariably returns orders and money sent to him for currency stamps, such stamps not being issued from his office. They are procured from the United States Treasurer, but no one need to send to him at present, as he is now supplying the Government only.

The total amount of postage currency issued by the Treasury Department, down to date, is $467,800. The issues of to-day were: of five cent notes, $2,000; of ten cent notes, $2,000; of twenty-five cent notes, $8,000; of fifty-cent notes, $15,000. Of one and two dollar Treasury notes, the total issue is $532,000—the issues of to-day being $40,000 of one dollar notes, and $60,000 of twos.

A BRAVE OFFICER JUSTIFIED.

Lieut. A. M. RAMSEY, First United States Artillery, commanding Battery E, attached to the brigade of Gen. GEORGE G. MEADE, having lost his guns in the engagement of June 30, requested a Court of Inquiry, which has reported that the battery was defended to the last with "coolness, gallantry and skill," and that the loss of the guns is due solely to the want of proper and timely infantry support.

NAVAL ORDERS.

Master EDWARD HOOKER has been promoted to Acting Volunteer Lieutenant for gallant conduct during the attack on Washington, N. C., and been ordered to the command of the steamer Wateree.

George W. MASTIN and JAMES PARSONS have been appointed Acting Assistant Surgeons.

The following officers have been ordered to the steam sloop Mohican: Capt. J. B. Marchand, Lieut. R. K. Beer, Acting Master E. B. Ely, Boatswain G. C. Abbott, Gunner Wm. Arnold.

PAROLED PRISONERS.

Adjutant-General THOMAS left Washington to-day for Annapolis, on business connected with the large number of paroled prisoners now at that station. There is no doubt he will promptly take initiative measures for their exchange, as he is the Commissioner of the United States for that purpose, and has heretofore satisfactorily performed similar service.

GEN. WEBER.

Brig.-Gen. MAX WEBER has been ordered to report for duty to Maj.-Gen. DIX, at Fortress Monroe; and

[illegible]

Oct. 3, 1861, Weber was brevetted Major-General, to date from August 31, 1861, with the rank of Major-General, in Gen. [illegible]'s Army.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

Indian Commissioner DEAN has recently written to Gov. RAMSEY, of Minnesota, that he has not very strong hopes of reestablishing friendly relations with the Chippewa Indians. At a recent interview with Chief HOLE-IN-THE-DAY, LAMERS came with four hundred armed warriors at his back, and maintaining throughout a tone of great hauteur and independence. The iniquitous plundering operations of the Government agents are without doubt a main element of the prevailing dissatisfaction and hostility.

Adjt.-Gen. THOMAS left to-day for Annapolis, to arrange for the transfer of our troops paroled by the enemy in the West, to fight the Indians. As cavalry alone are of any service against the Indians, and as scarcely any of our paroled troops belong to that arm of the service, it is difficult to perceive the utility of this arrangement. Minnesota has abundant infantry militia to guard her settlements, if infantry could do it.

A MILITARY RAILROAD.

Mayor WALLACE and a deputation of municipal authorities, have called on the President to-day to urge the joint action of the National and City Governments in constructing a military railroad from Washington to Point of Rocks, and also one from Washington East to Chesapeake Bay. The project met with favor from the President and Secretary of War.

APPOINTMENT.

Rowland H. HAZE, of Illinois, many years compiler and publisher of the State Gazetteer and Directory in Chicago, has been appointed to a clerkship in the Internal Revenue Department.

GEN. GARFIELD.

Gen. GARFIELD, who drove HUMPHREY MARSHALL out of Sandy Valley, Kentucky, and has since been serving in BUELL's army, reported for duty to-day at the War Department. He has not fully recovered from his dangerous illness, but is ready again to take the field.

ARRIVALS.

Ex-Gov. A. H. REEDER is here. George FRANCIS TRAIN arrived here to-day. Hon. Mr. RICE, of Minnesota, is in town.

WOUNDED.

Lieut. EDMUND HIGGS, of the Tenth New-York, was slightly wounded in the fight at Leesburgh on Wednesday.

IMPORTANT FROM KENTUCKY.

Surrender of Munfordsville to the Rebels.

Five Thousand Troops and Ten Pieces of Artillery Gone.

Bragg's Forces Estimated at 80,000 Men.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ia., Friday, Sept. 19.

Adjutant SLAUGHT, of the Seventeenth Indiana Regiment, who escaped from Munfordsville immediately after the surrender of that place to the rebels, has reached this city.

He reports that the garrison there, numbering from 4,000 to 5,000 men, comprising the Seventeenth, the Fiftieth, the Sixtieth, the Sixty-seventh, the Sixty-eighth and the Sixty-ninth Indiana Regiments, and one company of cavalry and ten pieces of artillery, have surrendered.

The surrender was made on Wednesday morning, our forces being completely surrounded by Gen. BRAGG's forces, estimated at 20,000 men.

Our loss in killed and wounded was fifty.

The rebels acknowledge a loss of 700 on Sunday.

LOUISVILLE, Friday, Sept. 19.

At the surrender of Munfordsville on Wednesday morning, the rebels took about 4,000 prisoners, whom they are reported subsequently to have paroled, comprising the Sixtieth, Sixty-seventh and Eighty-ninth Indiana, four hundred men of the Fiftieth Indiana, two companies of each of the Seventeenth and Seventy-fourth Indiana, one company of the Louisville Provost Guard, seventy recruits for the Thirty-third Kentucky, the Fourth Ohio Battery of six guns with four other guns in position.

The loss at Munfordsville previously stated was in the fight. There was two or three hours' skirmishing on Tuesday between the sharpshooters of both parties. The rebels did not attack us in force in the Sunday's fight. Gen. CHALKERS made an attack on our forces with eleven regiments on Tuesday night. BUCKNER's Division was added to this force. The firing on Tuesday was a rebel feint, to enable them to secure the north bank of the river. In that we lost two killed and four or five wounded.

LOUISVILLE, Friday, Sept. 19—11 P. M.

There are very many reports in circulation from down the road, the transmission whereof by telegraph is prohibited by the military authorities, who, however, entertain the hope and belief that the preparations now actively consummating will not only insure the safety of Louisville, but speedily clear Kentucky of her rebel invaders.

A BRILLIANT RECONNOISSANCE.

A Rapid Cavalry Dash to Within Three Miles of Thoroughfare Gap—Capture of a Party of Gen. Ewell's Body-Guard.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 19.

A cavalry reconnoissance, made from Gen. HUNTER'S headquarters yesterday morning, accomplished one of the most rapid and brilliant achievements of the campaign. They went within three miles of Thoroughfare Gap, performing a distance of eighty miles in less than twenty hours.

Near Thoroughfare Gap they discovered a rebel force acting as a body-guard to Gen. EWELL, who was in an ambulance, very badly wounded, and being escorted toward Richmond. Three of this body-guard were captured, together with about thirty more prisoners, several of whom were officers, and some wagons.

This report was sent in by Gen. BURNSIDE.

THE GUERRILLAS IN MISSOURI.

Bands Congregating on the Southwestern Border—Movements Against Them.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, Sept. 18.

Gen. SCHOFIELD has departed for Springfield to take command in person of the forces in the Southwest.

Guerrilla bands, under HUGHES, PIKE, CURRY and RAINS, have been congregating on the Southwest border, for the purpose of again invading the State. Their movements have been closely watched, and every preparation made to give them a fitting reception. Gen. SCHOFIELD enters the campaign with a full knowledge of the country, character and resources of the enemy, and speedy and conclusive achievements may be relied on.

THE WAR ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Destruction of the Town of Prentice, Miss.

CAIRO, Friday, Sept. 19.

The fleet carrying the rebel prisoners to Vicksburgh was fired into at Prentice, opposite Napoleon, Ark. Several balls passed through the Jacob, killing a number of rebels. None of our men were hurt. The gunboat landed, and gave the inhabitants fifteen minutes to remove the women and children, at the end of which time the town was burned.

THREE DAYS' DATES FROM EUROPE.

THE NORMANNA OFF SANDY HOOK.

Death of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Earl of Harrington.

Thirty Thousand French Troops Going to America.

The Fate of Garibaldi Yet Undecided.

A DECLINE IN COTTON.

SANDY HOOK, Friday, Sept. 19.

The steamship Scotsia, from Hamburg, via Southampton the 10th inst., was boarded by the News yacht at noon to-day, en route to New-York, and the annexed summary of his news obtained.

The steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Quebec, arrived at Liverpool on the 9th.

The steamship Nassau, from New-York, arrived at Southampton on the 8th.

From the uncertainty prevailing in England about the safety of the Great Western, she is designed to New-York.—Etc.; the Underwriters' premium had gone up to twenty guineas at Liverpool.

The Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred had arrived at Brussels.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Earl of Harrington are dead.

The Anglo Saxon's news had not the slightest effect on Consols, which were quoted 93¾@93⅞ for money, and 93⅝@93⅞ for the October account.

Loans were offered on the Stock Exchange at 1½ per cent.

The Paris Pays says that Spain has offered to send a contingent to Mexico, but that France would not accept the offer. France sends 30,000 men.

La France says the entry of Italy is impossible, but if it could be realized it would introduce a serious perturbation into European order, and all the political power of France would be compelled to demand compensation from Italy, and a change in her established territorial limits in order to guarantee herself against several powerful neighbors.

The Rentes were quoted 67. 95c.

The Montenegrins refuse to accept the conditions offered by the Turks, and, taking advantage of the present situation, have instructed their representatives at Constantinople to demand more favorable terms. During the conference, the Montenegrins have been fortifying Cettigne, and transporting all their valuables to Cetinia.

OMAR PASHA had recommenced hostilities. The Turks had set fire to the Servian portion of Belgrade, and the Prefect's palace was in flames. The Turks also fired on the inhabitants.

A later telegram says that MONTENEGRO has accepted all the conditions offered by OMAR PASHA.

On account of the state of siege at Naples, the Garibaldian anniversary of his entry into Naples will not be celebrated.

The press of Lombardy is unanimous in favor of an amnesty being granted to GARIBALDI and his followers.

GARIBALDI had requested to be allowed to embark on an English vessel.

Neither documents nor money were found at Aspromonte, where he was taken prisoner.

Nothing had been decided respecting GARIBALDI. His wounds were very serious.

There was little business doing in Australia. A royal commission had been appointed to report on the prospects of gold mining.

Great Fire in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Friday, Sept. 19.

At 1 o'clock this morning, a fire broke out in the brick building, corner of Water and Norton's street, used as a grain drying house.

The fire spread rapidly to the Evans and Sterling Elevators, which, with their contents, were destroyed.

The fire then crossed Norton-street, communicating to BELL's foundry, KLEIN & DOSSER's pump and block factory, and a number of tenement houses on Evans, Fly and Leonialeux streets, all of which were burned.

Crossing the Evans Ship Canal, the fire spread to EVANS' Office and warehouse.

In the warehouses were stored between 20,000 and 30,000 barrels of whisky and high wines, owned by Mr. WILLIAMS, the larger portion of which were saved.

DAVID BELL's loss is estimated at $50,000 to $70,000.

The loss of EVANS is not known, but it is mostly covered by insurance.

It is impossible at present to give anything approximating to the amount of the total loss or insurance.

The loss will probably reach half a million of dollars.

Some thirty or forty buildings are destroyed.

The elevators contained 13,572 bushels of wheat, 40,000 bushels of corn, and 20,000 bushels of oats.

BUFFALO, Friday, Sept. 19.

The following are the principal sufferers by the fire this morning: The Evans Elevator, owned by CHAS. W. EVANS, valued at $40,000, insured for $20,000; The Sterling Elevator, owned by D. S. ADAMS, valued at $20,000, insured for $13,000; Geo. C. WRIGHT, WM. WILLIAMS and GEO. TURNOUT, 3,000 barrels high wines, stored in the warehouse of JAS. C. EVANS, loss heavy, partly well covered by insurance; the warehouse of JAS. C. EVANS, loss $7,000, insured $4,000; the foundry of DAVID BELL, building and machinery, $20,000, no insurance; the Cleveland block, owned by C. M. REED, of Erie, Penn., and about fifteen or twenty wooden tenement buildings, last not ascertained.

The buildings were old, and of but little value. A large number of poor families have been rendered homeless by the conflagration. The total loss is estimated at $200,000; the insurance, so far as ascertained, is $120,000. The names of the companies are not ascertained, as yet.
